Improvement District Suggested and Debated By Princeton Future

Princeton Future Chair Robert Geddes introduced "someone from the outside" at the group's Saturday meeting in the auditorium of the Paul Robeson Center. Morristown-based lawyer and redevelopment expert Robert Goldsmith would, Mr. Geddes said, describe "three new tools that might be useful to us as a community," after eight years' worth of what he described as "what if" conversations.

Leading the rest of the first part of Saturday's meeting, Mr. Goldsmith's answer to solving Princeton's problems was the creation of agencies that work "within the parameters of state government" to "get things done." By way of example he pointed to Morristown's parking authority, which he said, has considerable authority over downtown activities, including flexibility in negotiating contracts. Also proposed were "improvement district" structures, which are, he said, "useful tools" that offer mechanisms to "provide supplemental resources to downtown areas in their efforts to address local needs." Mr. Goldsmith noted that there are currently 80 improvement districts in the state helping to achieve economic and social revitalization in places like Red Bank and Morristown. A third option — development corporations — is, he said, "more amorphous," but works to achieve similar goals.

Borough Councilman Roger Martindell asked Mr. Goldsmith about how it "works out" when an improvement district is "imposed" on a community. Mr. Goldsmith suggested that improvement districts are "not imposed," but crealed by the area's governing body or bodies. As such, he said, they should include the mayor, or the mayor's representative. Mr. Martindell went on to wonder about the efficacy of creating additional governing bodies when "the fundamental issue" concerns "existing structures that don't work." Mr. Geddes did not reply to Mr. Martindell's question about whether or not Princeton Future would address the ongoing structural problems in Princeton's governance.

During the "Community Conversation" that served as the second part of Saturday's meeting, Princeton University Secretary Robert Durkee observed that the question ol Borough/Township consolidation "seemed to generate the most conversation," and wondered why it was not being discussed. Mr. Goldsmith

Arts and Transit Designs Unveiled

"We believe exposure to the arts is vital," said architect Steven Holl, citing poet Paul Muldoon in describing the intenl behind his designs of the Lewis Center for the Arts during last Wednesday's open house for Princeton University's proposed Arts and Transit Neighborhood. The event was held in the new Paul Robeson Center for Ihe Arts.

Aimed at the area located just south of the McCarter and Berlind Theaters, the Arts and Transit Neighborhood proposaf plans to move the Dinky station 460 leet larther from town while incorporating it into a "21st century transil hub." A number of arts amenities, including the Holl-designed Lewis Center, will be on the site, and the plans include the building footprints ol a future satellite of the Princeton University Art Museum, which will house contemporary art as well as an experimental media studio.

"The arts and culturàl landscape is already where campus and community intersect," remarked University spokesperson Cass Cliatt. Neil Kittredge, a partner at Beyer Blinder Belle Architects and Planners, echoed her, making it clear that the University does not see the Arts and Transit Neighborhood as "an extension of the internalized setting of the campus," but rather as "a gathering place and a crossroads."

Seeing the space, which lies at the intersection of University Place and Alexander Road, as another "gateway into lown," Mr. Kittredge advocated thinking about the neighborhood as a new town square for Princeton, "analogous to Palmer Square and Hinds Plaza."

The Arts and Transit Neighborhood is part of the University's 10-year Campus Plan, and an initiative set forth by President Shirley Tilghman to enhance tho life of the arts at the University. The open house showcased a scale model of the entire site, building plans and maps, and information about traffic in tho area, and the environmental savvy of the Lewis Center. Members of the University, and architectural and planning teams were on hand to answer questions.

Though the Lewis Center for the Arts is still in its "concept design phase," according to Noah Yaffo of Steven Holl Architects, the building is looking to "maximize the visibility of creative life." It is designed so lhat passersby can catch glimpses of the process of art-making, since transparency and the Holl-coined phrase "maximum porosity" are key guiding principles of the architecture.

Regional Planning Board Approves Application for New Building

The Regional Planning Board approved an application from Kathleen Casey, Inc. for a Preliminary/Final Major Site Plan with variances for a new building lo be constructed at 44 Spring Street, after a prolonged diseussion of the proposal's problems and merits at its meeting last week.

Plans for the building, which is owned by Kathleen Jamison and now houses Judy King Interiors, include demolishing the rear portion and creating a four-story commercial building with a basement. The original plan called for nine-and-a-half-foot ceilings. In response to Planning Board members' objections to the discrepancy in size between the one-story carriage house that will remain in front and the larger structure proposed behind

GREEN ENTHUSIASM: The Sustainability Open House at the University spurred conversations about environmental initiatives and showcased information from research projects. Student groups, professors, researchers, and University staff were on hand to speak about the greening of the campus.

University's Sustainability Open House Designed to Promote a Greener Campus

More than a hundred students crowded the lower level of the Frist Campus Center at Princeton University for the Sustainability Open House last Wednesday. Environmental groups, university personnel, professors, and researchers spoke with those in attendance about topics like water quality, sustainable materials, compact fluorescent light bulbs, bicycle culture, and environmental justice.

Wesley Loo of the Class of 2010 is a member of the Ecology Representatives ("Eco-reps"), a group of students who work with the University's Facilities Department to "promote campus recycling and increased campus sustainability." He explained that one of the group's yearly projects, "Recyclemania," pits Princeton against other colleges across the US in monitoring how much recyclable material is diverted from the campus waste stream. Last year the University placed 25th in the 10-week competition, ahead of all of the other schools in the Ivy League.

Different branches of the University were represented at the fair. Facilities and purchasing staff explained how the entire institution uses 100 percent recycled paper, and how campus dining services purchase sustainable food. Samples of a green roof were available for perusal. Experts were on hand to answer questions and spark dialogue. Engineers discussed eco-friendly projects in the community. Student groups convened to speak about raising environmental consciousness in dorms and in the classroom. Green enthusiasm ran rife.

Associate Manager of the Office of Sustainability Jeffery Domanski, who is also a PhD candidate at the Woodrow Wilson school, said that open house was generally organized around the major tenets outlined in the university's plan on sustainability. Reducing emissions, conserving resources, and spurring innovative research and civic participation are the broad foci of the plan, which was announced this year.

Noting that the Sustainability Office itself was created in 2006 at the behest of students "in order to determine where we want to go with respect to sustainability," Mr. Domanski added that the day's event was "celebrating what's been done already" while also looking ahead to the future.

The goals of the sustainability plan include decreasing "campus carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by 2020," and designing "new construction and renovations to use 50 percent less energy than required by current energy code," alongside creating a heightened sense of environmental stewardship. The five-year giving campaign "Aspire: A Plan for Princeton" aims to "invest $325 million in teaching and research to stimulate fresh collaborations and propel inventive thinking on urgent questions related to energy and the environment."

One example of such "inventive thinking" is EPICS, the Engineering Projects in Community Service program. Regina Wang, a 2008 graduate of the Civil and Environmental Engineering Department, mentioned that she and fellow students assessed the air exchange rates of 40 homes in Princeton over the past year. "Many people seal up any cracks in their homes to conserve heat and energy," she said, "but if it's sealed up too much there may be unhealthy or unsafe airflow."

Whether demonstrating the use of solar panels, or working with the Stonybrook-Millstone Watershed Association, the EPICS-related initiatives all include elements of "educating the public regarding energy efficiency," said Ms. Wang.

All in all, the Sustainability Open House has apparently advanced the goal of expanding the discourse about sustainability on campus and in the local community as the University looks toward a greener future.

Web-based "Princeton Living Well" Aims To Boost Community Fitness

"I really want to motivate people to make health a priority in their lives," said Gail Everett, an avid power walker, exercise enthusiast, and lifelong resident of Princeton. She'd been venturing into the community since 1986 to get the word out about the importance of exercise and proper nutrition, and had been lamenting the lack of free health programs in Princeton. Until now.

When Ms. Everett found out about Princeton Living Well (PLW), a community web-based resource dedicated to promoting health and fitness that was launched this April, she immediately got involved. Citing the project as "one of the best things that's happened to this community in 25 years," Ms. Everett now leads the daily "Health is Wealth" walking program, teaches aerobics classes, and continues to inspire residents to become fitter.

PLW is the brainchild of Rick Weiss, the president of Viocare, a Princeton-based company that develops tools to connect communities with healthcare establishments and vice versa. After working with the Princeton Regional Health Department on the website for a weight-loss and wellness program called "Lighten Up Princeton" and collaborating with Alchemist and Barrister chef and owner Arthur Kukoda on a healthy prix fixe menu, Mr. Weiss was moved to create a website for the community, and Princeton Living Well was born.

Sustainability is an integral focus of the project, according to Mr. Weiss. An incentives system allows residents as well as businesses to benefit from the site. Residents are connected to myriad health resources including articles on nutrition, a community calendar of events, tools to calculate things like body mass index and target heart rate, workout plans, a place to log workouts, a forum in which to ask questions, and a rewards system in which they can earn points to receive discounts at local businesses and restaurants.

As Mr. Weiss sees it, "the more people that use the system, the more local businesses will get marketing opportunities, and thus more business." He added that "the healthcare organizations involved will see better use of their programs, so you get a nice loop between these three communities."

"Underlying it all, we're looking to improve diet and increase physical activity, and you could say there's a social capital aspect of it as well," said Mr. Weiss, noting that the project contributes to "building community."

Ms. Everett's involvement in PLW is an ideal example of such community building, said Mr. Weiss, noting that she and her students are "driving more and more people to go out and push other people and support them to make the change" to a healthier lifestyle.

"I've always worked out on my own, and any time I could see someone to help, I did," remarked Ms. Everett. "But I've never had the resources to take it out into the public." Now that PLW is up and running, Ms. Everett has a forum through which to share her knowledge and encourage others. In addition to improving their own fitness, Ms. Everett emphasized that she and her group are "making friends and having a good time."

Ms. Everett's interest in a holistic approach to health that incorporates nutrition, exercise, and mental well-being was spurred by her mother's death in 1970. Having been afflicted with high blood pressure and diabetes "before the message got out about aerobics," her mother "never had a chance to be healthier," noted Ms. Everett. "All my mother knew was to be dedicated to her five kids."

Regarding Ms. Everett's own children, she joked that "they grew up in baby chairs watching me work out, and when they started walking, they started working out too."

Getting to see others enjoy the benefits of exercise is a motivating force for Ms. Everett. After a free fitness class at Redding Circle two and a half decades ago, she said she "fell in love with aerobics" and wanted to share the experience with others. One woman who was in high school when she attended Ms. Everett's first class recently came back to attend its most recent iteration, 23 years later.

The accessibility of PLW is highly gratifying, Ms. Everett said, noting that "some people haven't had the opportunity to find out what it means to be healthier" because "you go up to the Y or New York Sports Club and you can't afford it."

Once members join the site for free, they have access to health resources and information. Even the casual internet surfer can learn a lot from the briefest of perusals. Carol Feiveson, the administrator for PLW, said that over 50 businesses and 400 people are involved in the website, and that several teams collaborated. A medical group at the Yale-Griffin Preventative Research Center designed the various health tools found on the PLW site, and a team from the University of Minnesota advised them about the rewards system.

"My dream is to see something like PLW live forever," enthused Ms. Everett. Currently, the site is funded by a grant from the National Institutes of Health, and is being evaluated. Mr. Weiss hopes that as part of the sustainable model, businesses will ultimately provide the funding necessary to maintain the system.

"Sometimes people think that exercise has to be a hard thing," acknowledged Ms. Everett, "but just 30 minutes a day is enough, and you don't have to run fast either." Of the website itself, she said, "I'm sometimes on Princeton Living Well multiple times a day, because I love it."

Rescue Report

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad responded to 54 calls for service last week.

On Sunday, September 14, the Squad responded for an elderly woman injured in a motor vehicle collision. The patient, a passenger in a vehicle that underwent significant front end damage, suffered chest and extremity injuries. The crew secured the woman to a spinal immobilization device, administered oxygen and monitored her vital signs during the transport to University Medical Center at Princeton (UMCP).

Later that evening, the Squad responded for an intoxicated person (one of three in a 40 minute period). Initially, the patient was found unconscious, but upon the Squad's arrival, was diaphoretic, disoriented, and slightly combative. He was transported to UMCP for monitoring. In total, the Squad responded to nine calls for intoxicated patients this week.

On Thursday, September 18, the Squad had back-to-back calls for bicyclists struck by automobiles. The first suffered a head injury and extremity abrasions after he was thrown from his bicycle into the windshield, and rolled off the hood onto the street. The second patient suffered neck and shoulder pain and facial abrasions. Each patient was secured to a spinal immobilization device and transported to UMCP.

TOWN TALK©

A forum for the expression of opinions about local and national issues.

Question of the Week:

"What do you think of the University's plan for the Arts and Transit Neighborhood?"

"It looks very interesting. I think that it will make the area much more useable, much more friendly. Also, I think it will encourage people to use the Dinky instead of going to Princeton Junction and parking there. Overall, I think it will serve not just the students, but the whole community."

–Salah El-Shakhs, Princeton

Carlo: "It looks very ambitious and interesting, but I think it is something that the University can pull off." Raoul: "This is not the first time that I have been to an open house and seen a plan. I think that it is a great project for the area and the University. Obviously, being a resident, you try to think of ways that it would connect better with the town. I think that this plan will make it easier to go to McCarter, things like that — definitely a positive."

"I think it's a very beautiful plan. It will really bring the arts into a center point of the University. I just hope that it starts soon. It will change an entry point into the campus and incorporate parts that are now distant places into the core part of campus."

–Joe Ramirez, Princeton University

"It will be tremendous for the arts on campus and I am excited by it. Up to now, the campus has been limited regarding space for the arts, and this will be great."

–Andrea Mirabal, Princeton University

"I think it's great, and I hope it will happen soon. It will change the neighborhood and Princeton."

–Veronika Hausle-Kalabacos with (left) Mikyo and Leonidas, Princeton

responded by saying that the current conversation was about "functions," adding that he feared that "spending the next year arguing about consolidation wouldn't solve existing problems."

Noting that the community has faced the "same issues over the years," Mr. Goldsmith suggested that the problems lie in how the community "works together." He suggested the creation of a task force to examine the "potential structure" of new municipal bodies that might better address ongoing issues. Neither he nor Mr. Geddes described how this task force might be created.

The next Princeton Future meeting will be on November 8 at the Princeton Public Library.

IT WORKED IN MORRISTOWN: Attorney and redevelopment specialist Robert Goldsmith described the Morristown Parking Authority's success in "getting things done" at the recent "Princeton Future" meeting, which was held in the auditorium of the Paul Robeson Art Center.

Princeton Adult School Offering New Fall Courses

Registration is under way for the fall 2008 semester at the Princeton Adult School. Offerings this year range from "Wanderlust: Contemporary Immigrant Literature" to a lecture series, "Bioethics and Its Impact on Our Lives." Students may register online or by mail. Among this semester's highlights is "Looking At Art," a survey and tour of the collections at Rutgers University's Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Museum. New offerings include "The Politics of Murder,: Writers and the World They Live In," "Music Makes Sense; A Guide to Listening," and "Container Gardening." Eight cooking classes, computer courses (including "Computacian in Espanol"), and courses in digital photography, Hatha- and Spanda- yoga, ballroom dancing, guitar, foreign languages, and a writing workshop round out the list.

An expanded exercise and fitness program includes daytime classes at the new CAN DO Fitness Center in Forrestal Village, with child care included.

Class subjects range from professional-level courses such as "How to Patent and Profit from Your Intervention," to courses tailored to individual needs such as how to buy and stage a home for sale, tai-chi, and beginning piano for adults.

Most classes are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings at Princeton High School beginning October 2. In addition to registration for ESOL students, in-person registration on Monday, September 15 is also available for foreign language students who are unsure about what class level is appropriate. Students should come to the high school's front entrance on Moore Street.

Registration online and by mail is already in progress. Students can register online at www.princetonadultschool.org or by mail using forms in the back of the adult school catalog. Those who have not received a catalog can obtain a copy at any area public library. Registration forms and the entire catalog are also available on the adult school Web site.

The Princeton Adult School has been offering classes for 70 years. Beginning with 20 classes in 1939, the school offered over 100 different courses in each of its two terms last year, with a total enrollment of some 4,500 students.

"We are especially pleased with the public's response to the adult school," said Ms. Lee. "Last year's enrollment was very gratifying. In fact, enrollment has recently been so strong that there are always several courses that are filled the first week. We always have to turn people away from popular classes with space limitations — courses such as the one course exploring the special collections at the Princeton University Library, wine tasting, and some of the studio courses ."

$10 million NSF Grant to Fund Computer Science Research

Princeton University is the lead institution for a new $10 million National Science Foundation grant that will fund research on "intractability" — a concept that has implications for a broad range of fields, from e-commerce to quantum computing.

The grant will help fund a Princeton-based Center for Intractability that will serve as an international hub for research, training and outreach, sponsoring visiting professorships, workshops, summer schools, popular lectures, and Web-based teaching material.

"Our proposed research will address some of the deepest questions in computer science," said Princeton computer science professor and Director of the Center for Theoretical Computer Science Sanjeev Arora.

Even with the exponential increase in computing power of recent decades, thousands of mathematical problems are so difficult that they are considered "intractable," or essentially unsolvable — even if the world's most powerful computers were harnessed together in an attempt to solve them.

Intractability is a fundamental problem that cuts across science and industry. It limits the ability of scientists to understand nature, and restricts the ability of engineers to design systems. By studying intractability, computer scientists and mathematicians hope to establish more clearly which kinds of problems can, or cannot, be solved efficiently by computers.

One important area the researchers would address, according to Mr. Arora, is cryptography, the science of hiding information from anyone but those who are authorized to see it. "Most people don't realize that e-commerce rests upon cryptosystems, which, in turn, rest upon problems that we assume are intractable and cannot be decrypted," he said. "But is this true? Every time you do an e-commerce transaction, how do you know that that hasn't been exposed to everybody else in the world? Understanding intractability will help better guide computer security efforts."

Another important area of interest for the researchers is quantum computing, a field in its infancy that aims to build computers by harnessing the physical properties of subatomic particles.

The team's research could lead to greater fundamental understanding of how nature goes about solving problems that currently, at least from a human point of view, seem too difficult to solve, said Mr. Arora. "In quantum computing and in other areas, our model of nature seems to suggest that nature is solving intractable problems," he observed. "We don't know whether this is a problem with our model or whether nature is doing something which we do not understand."

Princeton co-investigators are Eugene Higgins Professor of Computer Science Bernard Chazelle; Assistant Professor of Computer Science Boaz Barak; Associate Professor of Computer Science Moses Charikar; and James S. McDonnell Distinguished University Professor of Computer Science Robert Tarjan.

The five-year grant also includes researchers from the Institute for Advanced Study, New York University, and Rutgers University.

Stuart a Charter Member Of College Keys Compact

Stuart Country Day School of the Sacred Heart has become a charter member of the College Board's CollegeKeys Compact. The Compact seeks to support students from low-income families as they work toward preparing for, getting into and succeeding in college. Stuart is one of the first 500 schools to join this initiative begun by the College Board just nine months ago.

Stuart's Headmistress Sr. Frances de la Chapelle, stressed Stuart's commitment to helping students of limited means prepare for college success. "We are pleased that the College Board has recognized our efforts to support students with financial needs as they prepare to take on roles as leaders in college and beyond," she said.

As part of the CollegeKeys initiative, Stuart has entered into a contract with the College Board to actively pursue ways and dedicate resources to help students be admitted to, and excel in college. Stuart has a history of success with programs to assist students of limited financial means as they prepare for college. In addition to its College Counseling program, Stuart also supports low Income students through the Angels scholarship program.

"Adding Stuart Country Day School to the CollegeKeys Compact roster is very significant for this important initiative, which works to improve competence and confidence among low-income students," said Ronald Williams, College Board vice president and head of the CollegeKeys Compact. "When asked, 90 percent of high school students express the desire to attend college, Yet for many low-income students, the dream is not achievable because they lack the means to attend college. We must do all we can to ensure these students are provided the access they desire and deserve."

Newark Mayor to Give Toni Morrison Lectures

Newark Mayor Cory A. Booker will deliver the series of annual Toni Morrison Lectures on "The Unfinished Journey of America's Spirit," at 8 p.m. each evening Wednesday through Friday, October 1-3, in McCosh Hall, Room 50 on the Princeton University campus. The event is free and open to the public.

Mr. Booker will address the following topics over three consecutive nights: "The Past: A Testimony to the Impossible," on October 1; "The Present: Through Cynicism, Negativity and Self-doubt," on October 2; and "The Future: Humble Hopes and Insane Idealism," on October 3.

Mr. Booker has been mayor of New Jersey's largest city since July 2006 and is the third person to lead Newark since 1970. His stated mission as mayor is to oversee an urban transformation of the city by marshaling its resources to achieve security and economic prosperity.

Sponsored jointly by Princeton University's Center for African American Studies and Princeton University Press, the Toni Morrison Lectures spotlight the new and exciting work of scholars and writers who have risen to positions of prominence both in academe and in the broader world of letters.

Mr. Booker's political career began in 1998, after he'd served as staff attorney for the Urban Justice Center and as a program coordinator of the Newark Youth Project. He spent four years as a Newark City Council member from the city's central ward, helping implement community programs such as increasing security at public housing facilities and building new playgrounds. He has been named as one of the country's "40 best and brightest" by Esquire Magazine, as one of the state's "top 40 under 40" by New Jersey Monthly magazine, and as one of "America's most powerful players under 40" by Black Enterprise magazine.Mr. Booker earned a bachelor's in political science and a master's in sociology from Stanford University, as well as a bachelor's in modern history at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. He completed his law degree in 1997 at Yale University.

The lectures will be compiled and published in book form by Princeton University Press, celebrating the "expansive literary imagination, intellectual adventurousness and political insightfulness" that characterize the writing of Toni Morrison, Princeton's Robert F. Goheen Professor in the Humanities Emeritus.

In addition to being simulcast live in McCosh Hall, Room 46, the lectures will be webcast live and archived online for later viewing at: www.princeton.edu/WebMedia/live/.

Video of the lecture, courtesy of a partnership between Princeton's Center for African American Studies and WNYC public radio, may also be found on WNYC's website at: www.wnyc.org.

Information about the event also can be found on the Center for African American Studies website at: www.princeton.edu/africanamericanstudies/news/morrison/.

ARCHITECTURAL ENCHANTMENT: Leonidas (left) and Mikyo are entranced by the model of the University-proposed Arts and Transit Neighborhood while Veronika Hausle-Kalabacos looks on. The open house marked the first time the tentative designs for the Steven Holl-designed Lewis Center for the Arts were unveiled to the public.

The family of buildings that comprise the Lewis Center will house theater and performance spaces, gallery spaces, classrooms, studios, and other amenities geared toward the visual and performing arts. The split-level structure will bring together the different spaces comprising the Center via an atrium that will have a reflecting pool as its ceiling to bring in natural light. Topside, the 89 by 89 foot pool will contain water (or ice) yearround. "There is something emotional about the possibility of that rectangle of water," Mr. Holl said of the choice.

The Lewis Center will also be one of the greenest buildings on campus. Even beyond an arts space, Mr. Yaffe envisions it as a "teaching tool regarding how to do sustainable architecture in this day and age." The building will incorporate a stormwater recycling system, geothermal heating and cooling, a green roof, solar array panels, and other features of energy-efficient design. In keeping with the University's Sustainability Plan, the building will use 50 percent less energy than required by code.

Surrounds and Transit Hub

During the presentation section of the open house, Mr. Kittredge elaborated on the overall design of the Arts and Transit Neighborhood. With the incorporation of new retail and restaurant amenities, a transit complex including the Dinky, the various arts spaces, and new methods to alleviate traffic congestion, the area will see many changes.

The proposed Dinky complex, which will be south of its current location, combines the Wawa with the station, has an international news stand, and a bike center that includes covered bicycle parking and a bike shop. It is designed to accommodate the 605 bus, jitney, and any future bus rapid transit system. Mr. Kittredge describes the transit hub as "purposely designed" to meet present transportation needs.

As for traffic, the intersection of Alexander and University is known for congestion. At peak times, approximately 1,500 cars use the roads, reported Mr. Kittredge, who added that since pedestrians and bikes must cross the street in the same place, that increases the current backup.

The proposed plan for the Neighborhood places a roundabout on Alexander Road to create the "smooth and continuous movement of cars," while a separate traffic light will allow commuters to get into the transportation center.

Community Reaction

Moving the Dinky from its present location seemed to be the largest point of contention during the public question-and-answer period of the open house. Calling the Arts and Transit Neighborhood a "development that's happening to the community, not for the community," Borough Council member Andrew Koontz expressed disapproval regarding moving the Dinky, and called for elected officials to take a closer look at the traffic data.

A spokesperson from Princeton Theological Seminary noted that the project would enhance the life of the members of that community, while other residents of the Borough and Township expressed concern and disappointment regarding the Dinky's proposed shift south.

"Four hundred and sixty feet is not inconsiderable for senior citizens," was heard amid murmurs of approval.

For the project to happen, the land must be rezoned to accommodate its proposed new uses. At the last Regional Planning Board Master Plan Subcommittee meeting held on September 10, the Board discussed the overall traffic impact of the University's 10-year Campus Plan and architect and Borough Council member Kevin Wilkes proposed alternative plans to the Arts and Transit Neighborhood which would maintain the current location of the Dinky.

Planning Board

it, and Board member Yina Moore's question about the need for two feet to accommodate "mechanicals," Ms. Jamison agreed to change the height of the ceilings to nine feet.

On the advice of the Site Plan Review Advisory Board and out of concern for its size in relation to other buildings in the area, the Regional Planning Board had declined to endorse an earlier application for the building's expansion. Site Plan Review Advisory Board Chair William Wolf said that the applicant's earlier presentation was "deceptive in scale" and that the disparity between the size of the front and rear portions of the building were inconsistent with the Master Plan.

In addition to presentations by her lawyer and architect, Ms. Jamison herself addressed the Board. Describing herself as a well-regarded Haverford antiques dealer she said, with some emotion, that "We have tried to please everybody." She said that the proposed building was intended to support her daughter, who lost her husband on 9/11.

Board members agreed that the building's location, at the corner of Spring and North Tulane Streets, being both a residential neighborhood as well as the beginning of the Borough's central business district, was problematic. While homeowner and neighbor Jim Donahue complained that the proposed "65-foot edifice will block our sunlight in perpetuity," it was noted that the building is, ultimately, in compliance with local zoning laws. "It's our fault," observed Mayor Trotman, noting that improvements in zoning laws would help with similar discussions in the future. Board members Barbara Trelstad and Wanda Gunning both voted no in the final vote.

During its "Findings of Fact" portion of the meeting, Board Members voted to accept Tenacre Foundation's "compliance of conditions," as requested at the Board's July 22 meeting. At that time the Board found Tenacre's expansion plans insufficient in protecting neighboring residents from potentially dangerous patients who strayed from the Christian Science Ministry campus, as happened in January of 2003 when 24-year-old Jaleni Manigault left the compound and stabbed Great Road resident William Sword. Mr. Sword recovered from his wounds, and Mr. Manigault was killed by police officers responding to a 911 call.

Princeton University's Master Plan will be the topic of the Planning Board's next meeting on October 2. Board Chair Peter Madison noted that the University had revised its earlier plan for a "mirror campus" across Lake Carnegie, choosing instead to focus on a "more walkable campus on this side of the Lake." He said that he expected the University to respond to questions about traffic and parking from the Planning Board's traffic consultant at the meeting.

GrandPal Volunteers To Read With Children

New volunteers are welcome to join GrandPals when they hold their first event of the season on Wednesday, September 24 at 2 p.m. at the Suzanne Patterson Building, 45 Stockton Street, Princeton (behind Borough Hall). Sponsored by the Princeton Senior Resource Center, the program will feature a panel discussion with current GrandPals on how to choose books that appeal to young children, and techniques for keeping them attentive.

The GrandPals program matches older adult volunteers with children in the Princeton Public Schools to promote a love of learning. Volunteers are partnered with one to two children for the school year. Most volunteers read once a week with kindergarten children in the Littlebrook or Riverside Schools. Others help with math and science skills, or assist with specific class projects at Community Park School.

The program builds intergenerational friendships among children and older adults who may not have a grandparenting relationship nearby. Volunteers do not have to be a grandparent to participate.

The program is free. Refreshments will be served. To register call Olivian Boon at (609)924-7108.

Springdale Road Seen as Alternative To Alexander as University Expands

To the Editor:

Princeton University is in the planning stage for a massive expansion that will lead to a reshaping of the downtown Princeton area. In particular, major changes are planned to the infrastructure in the area around Alexander Road. It is likely that the planned changes will, or could, result in significant traffic problems. In the overall planning process, consideration should be given to ways of alleviating the potential traffic problems. One of the ways traffic could be reduced on Alexander Road is to provide an alternative to using Alexander Road. Such an alternative would be to utilize Springdale Road — in addition to Alexander Road — that goes from Mercer Street and intersects Alexander Road near the Canal. Part of this road is currently paved and part is unpaved and barricaded. Princeton University and the Institute for Advanced Study own all or most of the land associated with this alternative.

Because of the enormity of the potential impact of the planned University expansion, it is important that the planning process consider solutions that may not be in the immediate vicinity of Alexander Road.

Master Plan for Community Park Pool Calls for Expensive, Unneeded Changes

To the Editor:

Princeton residents took part in an information session at the Community Park Pool (CPP) on September 6, at which the Princeton Recreation Department, accompanied by contracted consultants, project managers, and engineers, elicited input from the community regarding proposed changes to CPP. Since then, a Master Plan has been presented to the Borough/Township and one of our town's loveliest parks is in danger of being rendered unrecognizable and sadly generic.

At the CPP meeting, the Recreation Department and aquatic-industry representatives presented a proposal to upgrade the facility. This included a vision of what many consider a "theme park" version of CPP. Over and over, a diverse group of residents made thoughtful pleas to exercise restraint and preserve the soul of the complex. There was a generous exchange of ideas, as well as an air of assurance that the concerns and wishes of the pool's patrons would be considered going forward.

Sadly, the recently presented Parks and Recreation Master Plan arouses a fear many had at the meeting. Specifically, it describes a CCP with "two 30-foot water towers with varying types of slides and the possibility of developing more slides in the future," as well as a "large concession area" and "large water spray-ground." Also enclosed in the report are 15 pictures of hyper-designed community pools that presumably represent an archetype of what's to come; all are sharp departures from the beautiful simplicity of the existing pool facility.

Clearly the CPP requires thoughtful upgrading and infrastructure work, and many would welcome changes that improve and complement the existing experience. One resident remarked that CCP is a park that happens to have a pool in it. It's a great, affordable place to spend a summer day for people of all ages.

On an ironic note, one of the aqua-industry reps at the September 6 meeting explained that local pools around the country have invested in "alternative aquatic entertainment" because attendance has steadily declined, but then pointed out that this was not the case at Community Park, where attendance and satisfaction are high. This begs the question, Why? Why turn up the volume of the place?

It is an expensive proposition that's also elective and unnecessary. I'm not faulting the aqua-firms for suggesting significant changes that would generate business. But implementing the major aesthetic elements of the proposed CPP plan would be a tragic move on the part of our local government. CPP is genuine and unique. These are great compliments nowadays. I urge the planning board to respect the aesthetics and dynamics of this distinctive community and preserve what is undeniably a local gem.

While I understand this is the beginning of what promises to be a lengthy review period, and appreciate the Recreation Department's attempt to reach out to the community for input, the Master Plan's initial proposal may be an ominous sign of things to come. More is not always better.

BOOK REVIEW

Going Gently and Ungently Into Childhood's Good Night

Until I revisited our old, read-to-rags copy of Goodnight Moon, the sole subject for this column was Maurice Sendak, who turned 80 in June and was honored last week at the 92nd Street Y, where James Gandolfini read In the Night Kitchen, Meryl Streep delivered a passionate rendition of The Note on Rosie's Door, and Council Speaker Christine Quinn declared September 15 Maurice Sendak Day in New York City.

Sendak is a household word while Clement Hurd, who would have been 100 this year, is all but forgotten. Yet when he died in February 1988, a New York Times editorial paid tribute to the "inexplicably magical" Goodnight Moon, "the quintessential first book," in which Hurd's pictures illuminated a hundred of Margaret Wise Brown's words.

Out of all the "first books" we read to our child (even including Paddington Bear, Corduroy, and Pat the Bunny), Goodnight Moon was the bedtime favorite, which is one reason I still have our copy. All I have to do is open the covers and I'm back in touch with the exhausted euphoria that was parenthood. The "magical" effect is in the mood created when simple words are combined with deeply evocative images that encourage an affectinnate fascination with night, moon, and stars while calming fretful babies and weary parents. It's a lullaby in pictures, as pure a piece of music in its way as "Greensleeves" or "Toora-loora-loora."

Clement Hurd has the eye of a cinematographer. The shaded beams sent forth by the bedside lamp manage to suggest both the illusion of light and the gradual disappearance of it. Look at the last picture and you can see that the subtle undark darkness of the beams projected by the magic lamp have completed their sweeping possession of the room. No one had to turn off the light because it was never really on. The bunny's asleep, the moon is up, the stars are out, two kittens are snuggled on the rocker, and the windows of the toy house on the other side of the "great green room" are alight, everything hushed and serene, as it somehow always was from the first picture on, whatever the time of day.

Without intending to ponder the deeper meanings of so uncomplicated a work of art, I've often wondered why it's "a quiet old lady" in the rocking chair "whispering 'hush'" instead of her double, the mother bunny we can see in the framed picture on the far wall. That cunningly borrowed image from The Runaway Bunny, the previous Brown-Hurd collaboration, shows the mother fishing for her fugitive offspring. If you look at the earlier book, you'll find a more conventionally plotted variation on the standard bedtime story, which cynics can read as a veiled indictment of overprotective parents. When the bunny imagines he wants to run away (is he a "he" because little girls aren't supposed to want to run away?), his mother says, "Then I will run after you," and so she does, whether he's pretending to be a fish or a rock on a mountain or a crocus in a garden, wherein she becomes fisherman, mountain climber, and gardener, and so it goes, except that something remarkable happens on the two-page spread that shows the bunny as a bird and the mother as a tree. It's a sublime image. When he was in his twenties, Hurd studied in Paris with Fernand Léger, who would surely admire the winged bunny in the blue sky with its purple shadings and on the facing page the mother shaped into the leafy form of a tree with open arms, and against the heavenly softness of sky a field of flowers. If there were a Sistine Chapel of bedtime reading, this picture would be my choice for the ceiling (though the one that follows it, of the mother as the wind blowing the sailboat bunny where she wants him to go, is almost as lovely).

Mickey Mouse Meets Melville

Needless to say, Maurice Sendak's In the Night Kitchen is something else altogether, even though it's every bit as much a "night book" if not a quintessential first read. The operative word is excitement. Mickey's neither on his way into peaceful sleep or pretending to run away; he's embarking on an adventure, and if it's "only a dream," it's a dream he seems to demand. He's one tough kid, bossy, too — you can see why Tony Soprano would like him. He's a mob boss in embryo. When he hears noises in the night does he hide under the covers? No, he stands up and shouts "QUIET DOWN THERE!" For a less bold kid, that tumble into the night kitchen would be a nightmare with the three Oliver Hardy bakers morphing into bloated boogiemen out of the witch's kitchen in Faust. But Mickey is as spunky and resourceful as his Disney namesake. In fact, Sendak is a collector of Mickey Mouse memorabilia.

As he admits in an online interview with Hank Nuwer, it "all started in the late '60s when I was doing In the Night Kitchen. I needed things from my childhood, and the Mickey Mouse things were my favorite. They helped me kind of taste that time and time again. The whole collection was really a means of turning me on to my book."

Since Sendak is no less a collector and devotee of Herman Melville, it's hard not to see the jaunty heroes of Typee and Omoo reflected in Mickey's adventurous spirit. More than that, the element into which Mickey is dipped and clothed and out of which he shapes his little airplane, and particularly his submergence in milk ("I'm in the milk and the milk's in me!") may remind readers of Moby Dick of the way Melville dips and clothes, oils and submerges Ishmael and the crew of Pequod in the spermy matter of the whale. Melville aside, the real glory of In the Night Kitchen is spread out in the great two-page central image of Mickey hovering in his little plane above the milk bottle skyscraper in Sendak's kitchen counter reinvention of the Manhattan skyline with its pot and canister, colander, nutcracker, egg-beater, mix-master towers, the bakers way below, and the yellow moon and stars in the deep blue sky.

While Goodnight Moon encourages a soothing, accepting quietude, Sendak's Night Kitchen ride celebrates boldness. Before he slides back into bed, there's Mickey, naked atop the milk bottle, helmeted by a milk pitcher, bellowing, in big red letters, the book's most explosive message: "COCK-A-DOODLE DOO!" (also the title of one of Melville's weirdest, most spiritedly written short works).

Maybe it's Mickey's naked attitude, his red-lettered roar in the face of civility, that helped make In the Night Kitchen number 25 on the A.L.A. list of the 100 "most frequently challenged" books betwen 1990 and 2000. A naked boy (full frontal nudity yet) in a book for children would already have the custodians of moral values leaning on the local librarian, but a bold, defiant naked boy might suggest a rebel or radical activist in the making.

Or maybe just an 80-year-old artist standing with a cane by his side at the birthday event in his honor, telling the audience at the 92nd Street Y that the tribute and the readings had ignited in him "a feeling of wanting to continue to work" even "with the world falling down around us."

It's Coming

You're likely to find plenty of Sendak, and copies of Goodnight Moon and The Runowoy Bunny, at the upcoming Friends of the Library Book Sale (October 3 to 5), which volunteers begin setting up in the Community Room next week. Children's books have been a highlight of the sale for as long as I can remember, or at least ever since the days when children's librarian Dudley Carlson used to donate 15 to 20 boxes of accumulated library freebies. Babar the elephant is well-represented, by the way, in case anyone wants to ponder the deeper political meanings raised in Edward Rothstein's recent New York Times review of the Morgan Library exhibit, "Drawing Babar."

Edward Albee, Others Appearing At TCNJ's Thornton Wilder Conference

The College of New Jersey, which became the headquarters of the Thornton Wilder Society in 2005, is hosting the First International Thornton Wilder Conference from Thursday, October 2, through Saturday, October 4. Playwright Edward Albee will be among the participants at one of several panels and events that are open to the public. In addition, there will be a campus production of Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth by Shakespeare '70 each day at 8 p.m in Kendall Auditorium.

Thornton Wilder

Thornton Wilder's connection with New Jersey included teaching French at the Lawrenceville School from 1921 to 1928, with a break from 1925 to 1927 to earn a Master's Degree in French literature from Princeton University. No other state serves as the setting for part or all of a Wilder play, novel, or film as often as New Jersey. The Skin of Our Teeth is set in Atlantic City and fictional suburb Excelsior, New Jersey. In his 1931 one-act play The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden, Wilder has a character say, "I'm glad I was born in New Jersey. I always said it was the best state in the union."

Wilder's full-length plays, Our Town and The Skin of Our Teeth, both won Pulitzer Prizes, as did his novel, The Bridge of San Luis Rey; no other writer has won Pulitzers in both fiction and drama. His farce The Matchmaker was adapted as the musical Hello, Dolly! and his penultimate novel, The Eighth Day, won the National Book Award. He also wrote the first draft of the screenplay for Alfred Hitchcock's film Shadow of a Doubt.

Public Events

Open to the public from 10:50 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 2, in the TCNY Library Auditorium, a plenary session will feature keynote speakers Christopher Bigsby (Wilder's plays), Scott Donaldson (Wilder's novels), and Tappan Wilder (Wilder as teacher, lecturer, and spokesman). There are free Teaching Wilder Seminars for New Jersey teachers on Thursday and Friday but advanced registration is required.

A playwrights' panel with Edward Albee, Lee Blessing, Tina Howe, and Donald Margulies will take place in the Music Building Concert Hall from 1:30 to 3 p.m. on Friday. After the panel there will be a reading by Albee and Tony Award-winning actress Marian Seldes, followed by a reception, also open to the public, in the Concert Hall lobby. That evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Library Auditorium there will be a directors' panel with Keen Company's Carl Forsman, CENTERSTAGE Baltimore's Irene Lewis, and McCarter's Emily Mann.

Saturday evening at 7:30 a banquet in the Brower Student Center will feature the presentation of the Wilder Prize to novelist Russell Banks. The prize will be presented by poet J.D. McClatchy. Registration is required.

Information on registration, lodging, meals, etc. are available on the Society website. Go to www.thorntonwildersociety.org and click on the conference link (or go directly to the conference website at www.tcnj.edu/~wilder/conference/). For inquiries about the conference, please contact TCNJ Professor of English and TWS Executive Director Lincoln Konkle at wilder@tcnj.edu.

"Mexican Enough" Author To Speak at Public Library

The Texas-born author detailed her unique adventures — dancing with rumba queens in Cuba, and mingling with members of the Russian Mafia, to name a few — in her previous, award-winning memoir Around the Bloc: My Life in Moscow, Beijing, and Havana, and the guidebook, 100 Places Every Woman Should Go.

Ms. Griest, who is making her third appearance at the library, was a Hodder Fellow at Princeton University in 2005-06. She has had several writing residencies around the world.

The library's Caroline Llewellyn Champlin Writers Talking Series has been presenting writers, including Ellen Curry, Thulani Davis, Richard Ford, Thomas Kenneally, Paul Krugman, John McPhee, Joyce Carol Oates, Kenzaburo Oe, Alicia Ostriker, Richard Preston and Wendy Wasserstein, to library audiences for more than 25 years. The series is named in memory of a Princeton author and librarian.

AUTHOR TALK: Writer Stephanie Elizondo Griest will appear Monday, September 29, at 7:30 p.m. at Princeton Public Library.

POETRY READING: Penny Harter (left) and Shelley Kiernan (right) are the featured poets for the September edition of the U.S. 1 Poets Invite series at Princeton Public Library on Wednesday, September 24, at 7:30 p.m. They will read for 20 minutes each, followed by an open mic session. A teaching artist for the New Jersey Writers Project, Ms. Harter's recent books include "The Night Marsh," "Along River Road," "Lizard Light: Poems From the Earth," and "Buried in the Sky." A Princeton resident, Ms. Kiernan is a member of the U.S. 1 Poets Cooperative. Her work has appeared in U.S.1 Worksheets and Feminist Studies. The series will continue on Wednesday, November 19, at 7:30 p.m., with poets Lynn Levin and Emily Nguyen.

Mercer County Community College Gallery Curator Tricia Fagan assisted Mr. Koeppel in the selection of artists for this show.

TOMATOES AND WINE: This painting by artist Larry Chestnut is among those that will appear in D&R Greenway's new exhibit, "The Land that Feeds You," celebrating New Jersey's bounty. The opening reception for the show is Thursday, September 25, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The exhibition will be available for viewing during normal business hours from September 15 through November 7 in the Marie L. Matthews Galleries of D&R Greenway Land Trust's Johnson Education Center, One Preservation Place, Princeton.

Ms. Stadelmeier also worked with first- and second-graders at The Arts Council of Princeton's 2008 Summer Arts and Drama Camp, and their work, including a paper quilt on the theme of Earth, Air and Water, will be featured as well. In addition, Arts Council of Princeton Community Arts Manager Maria Evans is working with children of the Princeton Nursery School on Leigh Avenue to create artworks showing "Foods of the Garden State" for "The Land That Feeds You."

Conference Using Art To Communicate with Youth

"Breaking Down the Walls: Reaching Youth, Families and Communities Through the Arts" will be held on October 23 and 24 at the Busch Campus Center of Rutgers University in Piscataway. The program is sponsored by the Center for the Arts and the Institute for Families at the Rutgers School of Social Work. New Jersey Secretary of State Nina Mitchell Wells will present the keynote address.

This is the ninth year that the Center for the Arts, a nonprofit organization, and the Institute for Families are offering the program. In addition to the annual conference, the two agencies have been collaborating for 12 years on what Center for the Arts Executive Director Lois Saperstein describes as an effort "to educate arts organizations, artists, prevention specialists, social workers, community workers, teachers, and counselors in the utilization of the arts as a tool in a comprehensive prevention strategy and as a positive youth development tool." A certificate program in using the arts in prevention is available through the Institute for Families.

Conference topics include "Getting High on Poetry: Substance Abuse Prevention, Intervention," "Understanding Conflict through Drama," "Art Education as Social Engagement: Exploring Gender and Women Artists in K-12 and Beyond," "Making the Connection: Srategies for Engaging Youth Through the Creative Arts," "Expressive Arts: A Spiritual Connection, from the Aging Baby Boomer to the Frail Elderly," and "Oral History and the Dramatization of Life Stories." Workshops focusing on the arts in health include a discussion of the collaboration between Montclair State University's College of Arts and New Jersey Medical School/ UMDNJ's Autism Center to create the Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) community. In "Spotlight on Newark Arts" panelists will talk about how arts organizations are making a positive impact on the Newark community, and a roundtable discussion will focus on museums and their education departments, and how they work with the community.

Scholarship money is available to assist with the conference registration fee, which is $175. To register or for more information, call Ms. Saperstein at (732) 591-2362, or email artsconference@aol.com.

THEATER REVIEW

Think You've Had a Bad Day? Check Out the MaGrath Sisters; Henley's "Crimes of the Heart" Opens Theatre Intime Season

Have you had a bad day recently? If you want to know just how bad a day can be, meet the MaGrath sisters from Beth Henley's Pulitzer Prize-winning Crimes of the Heart (1979), currently playing at Theatre Intime.

Ma MaGrath set the tone a few years back when she gained nationwide attention by hanging herself in the basement, along with the family cat. Now there's the responsible oldest sister Lenny (Laura Hankin), on her 30th birthday, with a shrunken ovary and a shriveled up love life. Her beloved horse Billy Boy has just been struck by lightning, granddaddy has gone into the hospital with "blood vessels popping in his head," little sister is in jail, and nobody has remembered Lenny's birthday.

Then there's middle sister Meg (Sara-Ashley Bischoff), just home from Hollywood, where her singing career has completely failed. She's recently been released from a mental institution and ardently continues to follow her penchant for cigarettes, alcohol, and men.

And, not to be outdone by her older sisters, 24-year-old Babe (Bethy Atkins) has just shot her husband ("didn't like his looks"), who caught her having an affair with a fifteen-year-old. She gets out of jail on bail, but fears losing her mind and attempts to follow her mother's lead by trying to kill herself — first with a noose, then with her head into the oven.

In case you hadn't guessed, this is the South, Hazlehurst, Mississippi, in the vein of William Faulkner, Flannery O'Connor, and Eudora Welty, with a sprinkling of Tennessee Williams' Southern Gothic. What you might not have guessed from the description of the three protagonists is that this is a comedy, one of the funniest and finest this country produced in the latter half of the twentieth century.

The Intime undergraduate company, under the direction of Princeton University junior Sophie Gandler, handles this challenging material with energy, style and intelligence, delivering a lively, entertaining performance. The play's six characters are all eccentric and interesting, and the Intime actors bring them to life with conviction and spirit, skillfully bridging the gaps in age, geography, culture and character.

During the course of the action — just one day and the following morning, the sisters work through painful memories and rediscover their deep family bond. Some inconsistencies in Southern accents and an occasional lapse in credibility early on give way to considerable depth of characterization and strong chemistry in their relationships.

Ms. Hankin, Ms. Bischoff, and Ms. Atkins all develop complex, appealing three-dimensional characters — full of the idiosyncrasies and incongruities in behavior and language that make them interesting and convey the rich humor and humanity in this play.

LAW AND LOVE: Barnette Lloyd (Marshall Everett), local lawyer pursuing an affection for his client and a vendetta against their opponent, approaches his client Babe MaGrath (Bethy Atkins) in a romantic moment in Beth Henley's Southern Gothic comedy "Crimes of the Heart" (1979), playing through Saturday, September 27 at the Hamilton Murray Theater on the Princeton University campus.

"Crimes of the Heart" will run September 25 to 27, with performances at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday and a 2 p.m. matinee on Saturday. Order tickets at (609) 258-1742 or www.princeton.edu/utickets. Visit www.theatreintime.org for further information.

Stacy Testa as the sharp-tongued, bossy cousin Chick; Stephen Strenio as Meg's old flame, abandoned by her five years earlier during Hurricane Camille; and Marshall Everett as Babe's lawyer, with a longstanding affection for his client (she sold him a pound cake at a bazaar once) and a personal vendetta against Babe's husband, all create sharply defined, memorable supporting characters.

Production values and publicity, which were perhaps rushed by the early opening date, could use an upgrade here. Set design by Megan Thompson presents — rather sparsely and flimsily — the MaGrath kitchen, with lighting by Laura Huchel and costumes by Jackie Bello, Lianna Kissinger-Virizlay, and Margaret White. This hilarious, poignant show deserves a bigger audience than the handful of appreciative supporters in attendance last Saturday night.

Crimes of the Heart received much acclaim in its original 1981 Broadway run, starring Mia Dillon, Mary Beth Hurt, and Lizbeth Mackay. In 1986, it became a successful movie featuring Sissy Spacek, Jessica Lange, and Diane Keaton, with screenplay by Ms Henley.

Though her most recent play, Ridiculous Fraud, achieved some success in its opening at McCarter Theatre in 2006, Crimes of the Heart, Beth Henley's first play, remains her best, thirty years later. Ms Henley may have exhausted her richest family memories and wildest southern stories in this outrageously comical and loving masterpiece — all the more reason to catch the current Theatre Intime production, especially if you think you've had a bad day recently.

David Sedaris

State Theatre to Present Humorist David Sedaris

New Brunswick's State Theatre will present An Evening with David Sedaris on Thursday, October 2 at 8 p.m. The best-selling author, NPR humorist, and Grammy Award nominee will read stories from his new book, When You Are Engulfed in Flames, and excerpts from his previous works.

The author of Borrel Fever and Holidoys on Ice, as well as collections of personal essays (Noked, Me Tolk Pretty One Doy, and Dress Your Fomily in Corduroy ond Denim), his essays appear regularly in Esquire and The New Yorker. His most recent collection of essays, When You Are Engulfed in Flames, was published in June. A new edition of Holidoys on Ice will be released on October 1.

Mr. Sedaris's original radio pieces can be heard on This American Life, distributed nationally by Public Radio International. In 2001, he became the third recipient of the Thurber Prize for American Humor and was named Humorist of the Year by Time magazine. He has also been nominated for two Grammy Awards for Best Spoken Word Album and Best Comedy Album.

GUYS AND DAMES: Preparing to set sail at Mercer County Community College's Kelsey Theatre in October is "Dames at Sea," featuring, from left, John Ragazzo, Liat Perelman, Jim Petro, Melissa Rittmann, Cathy Liebars, and Joe Zedeney. The musical comedy will open on Friday, October 17 at 8 p.m. and run for two weekends through October 26. For tickets, call the Kelsey box office at (609) 570-3333 or visit www.kelseytheatre.net.

"Dames at Sea" to Open At Community College

Dames ot Seo, the still-fresh 40-year-old musical comedy that won the 1969 Outer Critics Circle Award for Best Off-Broadway Musical, will begin a two-weekend run at Mercer County Community College's Kelsey Theatre on Friday, October 17 at 8 p.m. A reception with the cast and crew will follow the opening night performance.

Presented by Pierrot Productions, the show tells the story of Ruby, a small town girl who tap dances her way from the bus station to stardom in just 24 hours.

Written by George Haimsohn and Robin Miller, with music by Jim Wise, Domes ot Seo pays tribute to the Busby Berkeley all-singing, all-dancing Hollywood extravaganzas of the 1930s. With high camp and a touch of silliness, the show chronicles the adventures of Ruby, fresh off the bus from Utah with only a pair of tap shoes in her suitcase, who quickly falls in love with a sailor, then saves a Broadway show by stepping in when the star can't go on. The show's songs are nostalgic, lyrical, and clever. And the joke remains fresh — that a cast of six, with minimal accompaniment, can pull off a spoof of the large, lavish movie musical genre in the 42nd Street tradition.

The cast will include Cathy Liebars of Langhorne, Pa., as Mona, Liat Perelman of Plainsboro as Joan, Jim Petro of Hamilton as Dick, John Ragazzo of East Windsor as Lucky, Melissa Rittmann of Ewing as Ruby, and Joe Zedeny of East Windsor as Hennessey. It will be directed by Pete LaBriola of Pennington, with musical direction by Lou Woodruff of Washington Crossing, Pa., and Pam Sharples of East Windsor, and choreography by Kat Ross of Langhorne, PA.

Performances will be Fridays and Saturdays, October 17, 18, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m., and Sundays, October 19 and 26 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $16 for adults, $14 for seniors, and $12 for students and children, and may be purchased online at www.kelseytheater.net or by calling the Kelsey box office at (609) 570-3333. The Kelsey Theatre is located on MCCC's West Windsor campus at 1200 Old Trenton Road.

Sock-Eating Plants Star In Kelsey Kids Show

A clash between a neatness nut and a slob will mark the beginning of the new Kelsey Kids Series season at Mercer County Community College's Kelsey Theatre when The Plant That Ate Dirty Socks arrives for two shows on Saturday, October 11 at 2 and 4 p.m.

A production of the award-winning Theatreworks/USA company, the new musical is based on Nancy McArthur's best-selling children's book series.

The Oscar and Felix of a new generation, brothers Norman and Michael battle it out in their shared bedroom as Michael's assortment of baseball cards, crumpled papers, clothes, and piles of dirty socks invade Norman's spotless domain. When the boys send away for "Amazing Beans," the unexpected happens: the beans sprout into large plants that begin to devour the socks. The musical's fun-filled twists and turns lead up to the school's big science fair, where the boys learn valuable lessons about embracing individuality and working together.

Based in New York City, Theatreworks/USA is America's largest professional not-for-profit theatre for young and family audiences, touring approximately 16 shows annually. The company's shows reach an audience of more than four million people annually in 49 states and Canada, in venues as varied as elementary school gymnasiums, regional fine arts centers, and Broadway-sized theaters.

Tickets for The Plant That Ate Dirty Socks are $8 for children, students and senior citizens, $10 for adults. They may be purchased online at www.kelseytheatre.net or by calling the Kelsey box office at (609) 570-3333. The Kelsey Theatre is located on MCCC's West Windsor campus at 1200 Old Trenton Road.

Latin American Films At Documentary Festival

The 2008 Princeton Documentary Festival, presenting new films from Latin America and Spain, will take place on Thursday, October 2 through Saturday, October 4 in East Pyne Room 10 on the Princeton University campus. The event is free and open to the public.

The Documentary Festival is sponsored by the University's Department of Spanish and Portuguese Languages and Cultures, Program in Latin American Studies, University Center for Human Values, Council of the Humanities, and Shelby Cullom Davis Center for Historical Studies; and by the British Arts and Humanities Research Council. It aims to contribute to a comprehensive vision of the Latin American and Spanish cultures, while encouraging a more informed debate about the topics addressed in the films and about the current state of documentary production.

This year's festival, titled "Real Stories: Fact and Fiction in the Documentary," will feature documentaries directed by Edgardo Cozarinsky, José Luis Guerín, Luis Ospina, and Eduardo Coutinho. Messsrs. Cozarinsky, Guerin and Ospina, as well as Brazilian film critic Consuelo Lins, are scheduled to participate in lectures and discussions following the film screenings.

In the movies featured, the directors negotiate the uncertain frontier where documentary and storytelling meet. The films include Ploying by Eduardo Coutinho (Brazil), 2007; The Vampires of Poverty by Luis Ospina and Carlos Mayolo (Colombia), 1978; The Supreme Uneasiness: Incessant Portrait of Fernando Vallejo by Luis Ospina (Colombia), 2003; One Man's War by Edgardo Cozarinsky (France), 1981; and Photos in the City of Sylvia by José Luis Guerin (Spain), 2007. All films will be screened in their original language with English subtitles.

The annual documentary festival was created in 2002 to bring attention to the creative explosion of documentary filmmaking in Latin America and Spain. Through public screenings, commentary, and discussions, the festival provides its audiences with films that might otherwise not be available in the United States. A full schedule of events is available online at www.princeton.edu/spo/films.

Anniversary Season Of 6 Concerts Slated By Princeton Singers

The Princeton Singers, under the direction of artistic director Steven Sametz, will celebrate its 25th anniversary concert season with a series of programs featuring music based on the celestial theme of "Sun, Moon, and Stars." Throughout the season, concerts will also highlight works that have come to be known as "signature" pieces of The Princeton Singers during its 25-year existence.

Mr. Sametz will also mark an anniversary this year, his tenth season with The Princeton Singers.

The 2008-09 season will begin with a concert titled "Incandescence" on Friday, October 24 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, October 25 at 7 p.m. at the Princeton University Art Museum. The annual collaborative, interdisciplinary program encourages the audience to experience art in a fresh way. This year, The Princeton Singers joins the Princeton University Art Museum and its exhibit of works by Jasper Johns to present an evening of music and dance with guest choreographer Myra Bazell and dancer Katharine Livingston. The program will explore the relationship between Mr. Johns, Merce Cunningham, and John Cage, and feature a premiere of The Princeton Singers' 2008 commissioned work, The Windhover by Mr. Sametz, based on the poem of the same name by Gerard Manley Hopkins. Tickets are $15, and may be purchased from The Princeton Singers or through Princeton University Ticketing at (609) 258-9220.

The concert will be preceded by a free panel discussion on Tuesday, October 21, "Cage, Cunningham, and Johns: Interdisciplinary Alchemy at and after Black Mountain," at 5 p.m. in the Robert Solley Theatre at the Paul Robeson Center for the Arts, 102 Witherspoon Street. Panelists will include Mr. Sametz, choreographer Myra Bazell, Maggi Johnson, a visual artist and alumna of Black Mountain College, and Eva Diaz, Curator of Art in General, New York.

The Singers will next present A Child's Christmas in Wales on Saturday, December 13 at 6 p.m. at Nassau Presbyterian Church, 61 Nassau Street. The concert will reprise The Princeton Singers' popular presentation of music complementing Dylan Thomas's classic Christmas story of misrule and mayhem in the life of a country boy at Christmas. The music will include traditional holiday favorites and carols, narrated by the Rev. David Davis of Nassau Presbyterian. The program is recommended for children ages 12 and up and will be followed by a complimentary reception. Tickets are $25 for adults and seniors, $15 for students.

A "banquet of love songs and sinful desserts" titled If Music Be the Food of Love will follow on Saturday, February 14 at 8 p.m. at the Johnson Education Center at the D&R Greenway Land Trust off Rosedale Road. The concert will be repeated on Sunday, February 15 at 3:30 p.m. at Grace Episcopal Church, 4 Madison Avenue, Madison, N.J. Harpist Barbara Biggers will join the chorus in a program of madrigals, opera arias, and virtuoso part songs. A post-concert dessert and champagne reception will follow. Tickets, which include the reception, are $30 per person or $20 for students.

The season will conclude with "I Have Had Singing," a celebration of 25 years of music making, on Saturday, April 4 at 4:30 p.m. in Trinity Episcopal Church, 33 Mercer Street. The program will range from traditional English cathedral works to contemporary pieces by Mr. Sametz. The concert will be followed by a post-concert benefit reception at The Nassau Club.

Mr. Sametz is the Ronald J. Ulrich Professor of Music and director of Lehigh University Choral Arts, one of the country's premiere choral programs. He is also the founding director of The Lehigh University Choral Composer Forum, a summer course of study designed to mentor emerging choral composers. His recent guest conducting appearances include the Taipei Philharmonic Foundation, Berkshire Music Festival, New York Chamber Symphony, and Netherlands Radio Choir.

Founded in 1983 by John Bertalot, then choirmaster-organist at Trinity Church, the Princeton Singers has since become a force in the creation of new works for choir. Both through a strong commissioning program and participation in workshops for aspiring composers, the ensemble is strongly committed to the creation of new choral repertoire.

In addition to its performances in Princeton, the ensemble has been featured at conventions of the American Guild of Organists, the American Choral Directors Association, and Chorus America. Mr. Sametz has led the ensemble in collaborative concerts with Chanticleer, The American Boychoir, Westminster Choir College's Schola Cantorum, Princeton Symphony Orchestra, and Lehigh University Choral Arts. The chorus has also been heard on National Public Radio's "Performance Today," "With Heart and Voice," and on broadcasts by the BBC while on tour in Europe. A full listing of The Princeton Singers' CDs may be found at www.princetonsingers.org.

House Calls: Bathroom renovation

Q We want to renovate a bathroom but I know it could be complicated. Any suggestions?

A Planning a bathroom renovation shouldn't be such a big deal; after all, the room is so small! But don't be deceived by its size. Remodeling a bathroom involves considerably more time, effort and decision-making than a typical family room renovation, even though it's only a fraction of the size. The more and better you plan before construction begins, the more successful the end result will be. If you're unsure about what to do, work with a designer to help navigate the waters.

If you intend to reconfigure or enlarge the room, try to understand the existing conditions in and around the space. A design professional can help make sense of what lies within the walls, under the floors and above the ceiling. This information is critical if you plan to move plumbing fixtures. Relocation of fixtures and associated pipes is much more labor intensive than merely swapping out one toilet for another in the same location.

Keep in mind how you'll use the room when considering layouts. Does the toilet area allow for some privacy? Is there adequate natural light and ventilation? Do you have ample counter space for your toothpaste and cup? Will there be wall-mounted lights at the mirror? (Ceiling lights cast shadows on your face that can complicate make-up application). Is your tub faucet within reach so you don't have to climb into the tub to turn on the water? Where will you store your extra toilet paper? Is there a towel hook close to the shower door?

Once you have a layout you're happy with, your designer will likely discuss product and material selections. You may decide to have a dual flush toilet to conserve water or an electric heating mat under the floor tile for added warmth. The list of products and materials include plumbing and light fixtures, floor, wall and ceiling tile and other finishes, cabinetry, hardware and accessories. To get a sense of the quality of products and finishes, don't rely on images in magazines and on the Internet: go to a local showroom to see and touch the items you are considering.

In addition to floor plans, your designer will likely draw views of each of the interior walls. In bathroom renovations, establishing the heights of half- walls, mirrors, light fixtures, tile layouts and windows are all essential parts of the design and can make the difference between an ordinary room and an extraordinary one.

Bathrooms require the labor of carpenters, plumbers, electricians, heating and cooling contractors, tile installers, painters, cabinet-makers, and sometimes even sound and telecommunications consultants. For this reason, having a person coordinate the work keeps the project running smoothly. You don't want the tile-installer laying tile before the plumbing pipes have been moved.

Bathroom renovations require careful planning and are complex to build. By taking the time to organize your project with experienced professionals, you will reap the benefits each day.

Please call Anne Sax with your home improvement questions at 609.921.2822.

Neeme Järvi

New Jersey Symphony Opening Final Season Under Neeme Järvi

The New Jersey Symphony Orchestra will present the North American premiere of Erkki-Sven Tüür's Symphony No. 4, Mogmo, on Sunday, October 12 at 3 p.m. at the State Theatre in New Brunswick. The concert will also be presented on Friday, October 10 at 8 p.m. at NJPAC in Newark.

The composer's Estonian compatriot Neeme Järvi will conduct, with Mr. Tüür in the audience. The concert will feature the famed percussionist Evelyn Glennie.

Introducing the theme of the natural world, the program will open with Benjamin Britten's "Four Sea Interludes" from his opera Peter Grimes and include Edward Elgar's Enigmo Voriotions, a work considered one of the great unsolved mysteries of classical music.

Born in 1959, Erkki-Sven Tüür has followed his countrymen Arvo Pärt and Veljo Tormis to prominence, with commissions from the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, the Helsinki Philharmonic, and the Hilliard Ensemble. His musical background includes both conservatory training and a four-year stint as keyboardist for In Spe, a leading rock groups in the Baltic region. His experience with the rock band made a clear impact on his music, which is filled with the driving rhythms, futuristic timbres, and theatrical flair of progressive rock.

Magma — molten rock from the earth's interior that changes into varying textures at different temperatures — is the metaphor for the explosive energy and contrasting colors that characterize Mr. Tüür's symphony. Written for Ms. Glennie, it is described as "a symphony with a solo percussionist" in which the vigorous solo part is woven into the changing timbres of the orchestra, rather than forming a dialogue with it. Played without pause, it more closely approximates a four-movement symphony than a three-movement concerto.

Ms. Glennie is the first person in musical history to successfully sustain a full-time career as a solo percussionist, constantly redefining the goals and expectations of percussion performers. She gives more than 100 performances a year, performing worldwide with artists such as Nana Vasconcelos, Björk, Bobby McFerrin, Sting, Emmanuel Ax, and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. She has commissioned 150 works for solo percussion from the world's most eminent composers. The winner of two Grammy awards, she has written a best-selling autobiography, Good Vibrotions, presented two series of her own television programs for the BBC, and appeared on television shows throughout the world, including The David Lettermon Show, Sesome Street, and 60 Minutes.

The 2008–09 season marks Mr. Järvi's final season as Music Director of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. Born in Tallinn, Estonia, and an American citizen since 1987, he has conducted many of the world's most prominent orchestras, including the Berlin Philharmonic, Philharmonia Orchestra, Czech Philharmonic, Zürich Tonhalle and BBC Symphony Orchestras, Orchestre de Paris, Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, and the symphony orchestras of Sydney and Melbourne in Australia. In the United States, he has appeared with the New York Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony, San Francisco Symphony, Boston Symphony, and Philadelphia Orchestra. His discography includes more than 400 recordings.

For more information about the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, visit www.njsymphony.org or e-mail information@njsymphony.org. Tickets are available from the orchestra's website or by calling (800) 255-3476.

Anniversary Season Of 6 Concerts Slated By Princeton Singers

The Princeton Singers, under the direction of artistic director Steven Sametz, will celebrate its 25th anniversary concert season with a series of programs featuring music based on the celestial theme of "Sun, Moon, and Stars." Throughout the season, concerts will also highlight works that have come to be known as "signature" pieces of The Princeton Singers during its 25-year existence.

Mr. Sametz will also mark an anniversary this year, his tenth season with The Princeton Singers.

The 2008-09 season will begin with a concert titled "Incandescence" on Friday, October 24 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, October 25 at 7 p.m. at the Princeton University Art Museum. The annual collaborative, interdisciplinary program encourages the audience to experience art in a fresh way. This year, The Princeton Singers joins the Princeton University Art Museum and its exhibit of works by Jasper Johns to present an evening of music and dance with guest choreographer Myra Bazell and dancer Katharine Livingston. The program will explore the relationship between Mr. Johns, Merce Cunningham, and John Cage, and feature a premiere of The Princeton Singers' 2008 commissioned work, The Windhover by Mr. Sametz, based on the poem of the same name by Gerard Manley Hopkins. Tickets are $15, and may be purchased from The Princeton Singers or through Princeton University Ticketing at (609) 258-9220.

The concert will be preceded by a free panel discussion on Tuesday, October 21, "Cage, Cunningham, and Johns: Interdisciplinary Alchemy at and after Black Mountain," at 5 p.m. in the Robert Solley Theatre at the Paul Robeson Center for the Arts, 102 Witherspoon Street. Panelists will include Mr. Sametz, choreographer Myra Bazell, Maggi Johnson, a visual artist and alumna of Black Mountain College, and Eva Diaz, Curator of Art in General, New York.

The Singers will next present A Child's Christmos in Wales on Saturday, December 13 at 6 p.m. at Nassau Presbyterian Church, 61 Nassau Street. The concert will reprise The Princeton Singers' popular presentation of music complementing Dylan Thomas's classic Christmas story of misrule and mayhem in the life of a country boy at Christmas. The music will include traditional holiday favorites and carols, narrated by the Rev. David Davis of Nassau Presbyterian. The program is recommended for children ages 12 and up and will be followed by a complimentary reception. Tickets are $25 for adults and seniors, $15 for students.

A "banquet of love songs and sinful desserts" titled If Music Be the Food of Love will follow on Saturday, February 14 at 8 p.m. at the Johnson Education Center at the D&R Greenway Land Trust off Rosedale Road. The concert will be repeated on Sunday, February 15 at 3:30 p.m. at Grace Episcopal Church, 4 Madison Avenue, Madison, N.J. Harpist Barbara Biggers will join the chorus in a program of madrigals, opera arias, and virtuoso part songs. A post-concert dessert and champagne reception will follow. Tickets, which include the reception, are $30 per person or $20 for students.

The season will conclude with "I Have Had Singing," a celebration of 25 years of music making, on Saturday, April 4 at 4:30 p.m. in Trinity Episcopal Church, 33 Mercer Street. The program will range from traditional English cathedral works to contemporary pieces by Mr. Sametz. The concert will be followed by a post-concert benefit reception at The Nassau Club.

Mr. Sametz is the Ronald J. Ulrich Professor of Music and director of Lehigh University Choral Arts, one of the country's premiere choral programs. He is also the founding director of The Lehigh University Choral Composer Forum, a summer course of study designed to mentor emerging choral composers. His recent guest conducting appearances include the Taipei Philharmonic Foundation, Berkshire Music Festival, New York Chamber Symphony, and Netherlands Radio Choir.

Founded in 1983 by John Bertalot, then choirmaster-organist at Trinity Church, the Princeton Singers has since become a force in the creation of new works for choir. Both through a strong commissioning program and participation in workshops for aspiring composers, the ensemble is strongly committed to the creation of new choral repertoire.

In addition to its performances in Princeton, the ensemble has been featured at conventions of the American Guild of Organists, the American Choral Directors Association, and Chorus America. Mr. Sametz has led the ensemble in collaborative concerts with Chanticleer, The American Boychoir, Westminster Choir College's Schola Cantorum, Princeton Symphony Orchestra, and Lehigh University Choral Arts. The chorus has also been heard on National Public Radio's "Performance Today," "With Heart and Voice," and on broadcasts by the BBC while on tour in Europe. A full listing of The Princeton Singers' CDs may be found at www.princetonsingers.org.

House Calls: Bathroom renovation

Q We want to renovate a bathroom but I know it could be complicated. Any suggestions?

A Planning a bathroom renovation shouldn't be such a big deal; after all, the room is so small! But don't be deceived by its size. Remodeling a bathroom involves considerably more time, effort and decision-making than a typical family room renovation, even though it's only a fraction of the size. The more and better you plan before construction begins, the more successful the end result will be. If you're unsure about what to do, work with a designer to help navigate the waters.

If you intend to reconfigure or enlarge the room, try to understand the existing conditions in and around the space. A design professional can help make sense of what lies within the walls, under the floors and above the ceiling. This information is critical if you plan to move plumbing fixtures. Relocation of fixtures and associated pipes is much more labor intensive than merely swapping out one toilet for another in the same location.

Keep in mind how you'll use the room when considering layouts. Does the toilet area allow for some privacy? Is there adequate natural light and ventilation? Do you have ample counter space for your toothpaste and cup? Will there be wall-mounted lights at the mirror? (Ceiling lights cast shadows on your face that can complicate make-up application). Is your tub faucet within reach so you don't have to climb into the tub to turn on the water? Where will you store your extra toilet paper? Is there a towel hook close to the shower door?

Once you have a layout you're happy with, your designer will likely discuss product and material selections. You may decide to have a dual flush toilet to conserve water or an electric heating mat under the floor tile for added warmth. The list of products and materials include plumbing and light fixtures, floor, wall and ceiling tile and other finishes, cabinetry, hardware and accessories. To get a sense of the quality of products and finishes, don't rely on images in magazines and on the Internet: go to a local showroom to see and touch the items you are considering.

In addition to floor plans, your designer will likely draw views of each of the interior walls. In bathroom renovations, establishing the heights of half- walls, mirrors, light fixtures, tile layouts and windows are all essential parts of the design and can make the difference between an ordinary room and an extraordinary one.

Bathrooms require the labor of carpenters, plumbers, electricians, heating and cooling contractors, tile installers, painters, cabinet-makers, and sometimes even sound and telecommunications consultants. For this reason, having a person coordinate the work keeps the project running smoothly. You don't want the tile-installer laying tile before the plumbing pipes have been moved.

Bathroom renovations require careful planning and are complex to build. By taking the time to organize your project with experienced professionals, you will reap the benefits each day.

Please call Anne Sax with your home improvement questions at 609.921.2822.

CINEMA REVIEW

Ghost Town

Comedy Stars Ricky Gervais, Who Sees Dead People

What happens when you die? Perhaps you remain on Earth, a tortured soul unable to rest in peace until you resolve all of your unfinished business. This is the limbo Frank Herlihy (Greg Kinnear) has been stuck in for over a year following his untimely death in Manhattan.

He and many other disembodied spirits, who are invisible to humans but not to each other, roam around the city frustrated by their inability to communicate with the living. A way to connect the two worlds appears when something goes horribly wrong during Bertram Pincus's (Ricky Gervais) routine colonoscopy. After an accident with the anesthesia, the dentist appears to be dead on the operating table for about seven minutes.

On the advice of the hospital's attorney (Michael-Leon Wooley), the surgeon (Kristen Wilg) decides to hide the truth about what happened to Bertram. However, once he is resuscitated, it doesn't take him long to realize that something has changed, because he can suddenly see ghosts. Once the spirits realize that he is still alive and yet can see them, they implore him to intervene with long-lost loved ones on their behalf.

However, Bertram is a self-absorbed misanthrope who is not inclined to go out of his way for anybody. For instance, when a neighbor, burdened with packages, asks him to hold the elevator he deliberately pushes the "CLOSE" button instead of waiting for her to reach the door.

That woman, Gwen (Téa Leoni), happens to be the above mentioned Frank's widow. She is engaged to marry an attorney named Richard (Billy Campbell). Frank, who has been lurking around the apartment building hoping to sabotage their plans, befriends Bertram, and the two soon cut a deal.

Bertram promises to try to prevent Gwen from marrying Richard, who, it turns out, is a con artist who is only interested in her money. In return, Frank agrees to keep all the other ghosts annoying Bertram at bay. However, Bertram develops feelings for Gwen, too, and the novel love quadrangle which ensues is the hub around which Ghost Town revolves.

WILL YOU PLEASE JUST LEAVE ME ALONE?: Bertram Pincus (Ricky Gercais, left) discovers, to his dismay, that he can now see ghosts after he was revived from the accident during his colonoscopy which left him dead on the operating table for seven minutes. When the ghosts discovered that he could see them, they besieged him with requests to help them communicate with people in the living world so that they could resolve the issues that were preventing them from resting in peace.

Directed by David Koepp, this offbeat comedy is a cross between Ghost (1990) and The Sixth Sense (1999), because it combines some of the former's romantic elements with the latter's "I see dead people" theme. In addition, Ghost Town adds a few surprising wrinkles of its own.

You will enjoy this movie if you enjoy laughing at the insufferably stuffy British character that Ricky Gervais has perfected in his television roles. He is a coldhearted cad who experiences an 11th-hour epiphany so that the movie can deliver a universal message about what really matters in life.

Very Good (★★★). Rated PG-13 for sexuality, profanity, and drug references. Running time: 102 minutes. Studio: Dreamworks Pictures.

PU Football Starts Opener With Superb First Half, But Can't Match Citadel's Intensity in 37-24 Loss

Last October, the Princeton University football team went out of its league to take on Hampton University, a power in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC).

Buoyed by a large home crowd of 15,329, Princeton jumped out to a 27-14 lead by halftime. After Hampton's legendary band entertained the crowd with a rousing show at intermission, the Pirates ran the Tigers out of the building as they reeled off 34 straight points on the way to a 48-27 win.

Last Saturday, Princeton opened its 2008 season by exploring more untested waters. This time, the Tigers headed down to South Carolina to play The Citadel in its first-ever meeting with a Southern Conference school.

Once again, Princeton got off to a hot start, building a 17-7 lead over the 22nd-ranked Bulldogs by intermission before the crowd of 13,120 on hand at Johnson Hagood Stadium.

For Tiger head coach Roger Hughes, everything was going according to plan.

"I was really pleased with the way we started," said Hughes, who is in his ninth season guiding the Tigers.

"We played a flawless first half, we created one turnover and we had none. We really executed well."

But in a discouraging case of déjà vu, The Citadel produced a nearly flawless second half to overcome the Tigers. Starting with the return of a blocked punt for a touchdown early in the third quarter, the Bulldogs scored 30 unanswered points to turn the game into a rout.

The Tigers kept fighting with a late touchdown but it was just window dressing as The Citadel won 37-24 to improve to 2-1.

Hughes acknowledged that his team got frazzled as it absorbed the second half onslaught.

"You sensed that things were going on," recalled Hughes.

"People were pressing; thinking that they had to do something big individually. I think the lesson is that if everyone does what they are supposed to do and keep playing, we will be fine."

Things certainly started off fine for Princeton last Saturday. After forcing Citadel to a three and out on its first possession, the Tigers proceeded to march down the field. Senior quarterback Brian Anderson coolly guided the Tigers on a 58-yard drive that culminated in a 31-yard field goal by Connor Louden.

In the second quarter, Princeton was on the move again as Anderson and junior tailback Jordan Culbreath ripped off some large gains as the Tigers marched 78 yards. Culbreath ended the drive with a two-yard touchdown run as Princeton increased its lead to 10-0.

After Citadel answered back with an 11-yard touchdown pass to All-American receiver Andre Roberts, the Tigers didn't wilt. Peter Ploszek took the ensuing kickoff 15 yards and then handed off to Meko McCray who raced 36 yards to midfield.

Sparked by the big special teams play, Anderson ran and passed the Tigers down the field. The lefty hit Matt Zimmerman for a six-yard scoring strike with 18 seconds remaining in the half to give underdog Princeton a 17-7 lead at the break.

It didn't take long for The Citadel to seize momentum in the third quarter and change the course of the contest. Just over two minutes into the second half, Reggie Rice scooped up a blocked Ryan Coyle punt and raced 25 yards to narrow the gap to 17-14.

The Bulldogs took their first lead of the game midway through the quarter. With Citadel quarterback Bart Blanchard hitting some big passes, the Bulldogs marched down the field. The drive ended with a four-yard touchdown pass from Blanchard to Taylor Corbett as The Citadel grabbed a 21-17 lead.

The Bulldogs tacked on a field goal in the last minute of the quarter to take a 24-17 lead into the fourth quarter. All-American Roberts then struck again, returning a punt 54 yards to the Princeton 11. The Bulldogs wasted no time cashing in, taking three plays to get into the end zone and increase their advantage to 30-17.

The Citadel added another touchdown as Roberts gathered in a six-yard pass from Blanchard with 5:51 remaining to make the score 37-17.

Princeton didn't give up the fight as it put together one more scoring drive on the afternoon. Sparked by long Anderson completions to Adam Berry and Will Thanheiser, the Tigers marched inside the Citadel 10. After getting sacked, Anderson found Berry in the end zone for a 13-yard scoring strike as Princeton drew to within 37-24.

The Tigers recovered an onside kick on the ensuing kickoff but their last-gasp comeback attempt was ended by a DeAndre Smith interception.

While the loss to Hampton last fall left Princeton emotionally and physically spent as the Tigers proceeded to lose four of their last six games, Hughes doesn't see the Citadel setback as having the same impact.

"I don't think this is going to be like the Hampton game," asserted Hughes.

"I think we will bounce back emotionally from this, we also came out much healthier."

The Tigers come out of the Citadel game knowing that they have solid performers in two key offensive players, Anderson and Culbreath.

On the afternoon, Anderson went 20-for-41 passing with 206 yards and two touchdowns while rushing for 56 yards. The 5'11, 195 pound Culbreath rushed for 74 yards and a touchdown on 17 carries.

"I was really pleased with Brian; he was sharp," said Hughes. "For the most part, he played very well. In that eight-minute stretch in the second half, he did press a little bit. Jordan made some great cuts even on four or five yard runs. Jordan is our workhorse."

There were other bright spots on a day which saw Princeton outgain The Citadel 358 yards to 307.

"The offensive line played well overall," added Hughes. "Steven Cody and Scott Britton were good at inside linebacker. Weston Palmer and Meko McCray did a good job on special teams; there were a lot of positives."

Importantly, Princeton achieved some collective team goals in terms of turnovers, third down efficiency, and play in the red zone.

OPENING FEATURE: Princeton University running back Jordan Culbreath picks up yardage in a game last season. Last Saturday, junior Culbreath led the Tigers with 74 yards rushing but it wasn't enough as Princeton fell 37-24 at The Citadel in its season opener. "We had only one turnover, we had a good third down conversion rate (8 of 17), and we scored four out of five times in the red zone," said Hughes. "These are things that we worked on in the spring and in the fall camp."

Hughes acknowledged that the Tigers need to be sharper on special teams after a day which saw them get a punt blocked and give up a long punt return.

"We do have to renew our focus on special teams," said Hughes. "We always work a lot on that. We have to keep up the intensity, you can't let being tired keep you from playing on special teams. We can show the guys how some breakdowns in that area cost us momentum."

Notwithstanding the final score, Hughes believes his team is bringing some momentum into its home opener with Lehigh (1-1) this Saturday evening.

"I think the way we played in the first half and the way we finished the game gives us a lot of confidence that we can play with anyone," said Hughes.

"I think we also saw that when the other team raises its intensity level, we have to raise ours. I hope we can bring this into the home opener and keep momentum through the swings of the game."

With Annis Triggering Offense, PHS Field Hockey Gets First Win

Liz Annis and her teammates on the Princeton High field hockey team couldn't find an offensive rhythm in their first two games this season.

Finding goals hard to come by, PHS started their 2008 campaign by falling 3-1 to Notre Dame and then dropping a 4-0 decision to Hightstown.

Coming into the team's home opener last Thursday against Lawrence High, the Little Tigers were focused on the basics as they looked to jump start their attack.

"We really worked on making sure to be open for passes and connect with teammates," said Annis. "We really worked on communication."

Senior forward Annis found plenty of open space in the matchup against Lawrence, scoring a goal in each half as PHS pulled away for a satisfying 3-0 win.

In Annis' view, the game represented a breakthrough for PHS.

"We were able to make solid passes throughout the midfield to the sideline," said Annis. "We were able to follow through in the circle. We broke through today."

Annis enjoyed breaking the ice as her first half tally put PHS up 1-0. "I wasn't really sure what was happening," recalled Annis with a smile. "I just saw myself going to the goal. I just took a fling and it went past the goalie."

The Little Tigers were determined to not let up in the second half.."At that point we wanted to just keep adding a cushion to our lead," said Annis, reflecting on her second half score. "We wanted to make sure that they wouldn't score and catch up. It is really exciting to win a game."

It is an exciting time for the program with new head coach Heather Serverson having taken over for longtime mentor Joyce Jones, who stepped down after more than 30 years at the helm of the Little Tigers.

"I think it's working really well," said Annis, referring to having a new head coach.

"We are listening and we are having good practices. We are really paying attention to the drills and it is making us connect when it comes to the game. We went through two tough losses but now we came out on top."

Serverson, for her part, was happy that her team's work in practice paid off in the win over Lawrence.

"We have done nothing but work on offense for the last week," said Serverson, who had previously been an assistant coach for PHS.

"We work on the movement, on and off the ball. It just all came together today, I couldn't be happier."

The rookie head coach was certainly happy with the play of Annis. "She did a fantastic job today," asserted Serverson. "I really couldn't have asked for more from her; she put it all together too."

Annis had plenty of help on offense from senior Meg Reilly, junior Sydney Krueger, and sophomore Alyssa Torske.

"Meg is nothing but hustle; she is a fantastic player, both offensively and defensively" added Serverson.

"I thought Sydney had some nice balls that she laid out for Liz. I would say Alyssa has a lot of hustle that she adds, she is usually first to the ball. It seems that the rest of the girls follow suit when that starts to happen."

The PHS defense also made things happen, led by senior goalie Moriah Akrong, who recorded seven saves in the win over Lawrence.

"We are pretty solid down there," said Serverson. "Moriah definitely holds it together for us; she had that one diving save in particular today that was out of this world. Defense is not usually our issue. We have had some breakdowns but we are pretty solid defensively. It's the offensive part that we have to work on."

It was a special day for Serverson as she got the first win of her head coaching tenure.

"That is exactly what we needed right there, boom, boom, boom, three goals," said Serverson, whose team hosts Nottingham High on September 25.

"It was wonderful, I'm so happy. I am really just pleased that they have finally taken things we have worked on in practice and put them in the game. It just hasn't clicked for us like that and today everything clicked. We have a lot of young players that came right off the freshman team last year that were playing the entire time out there. For them to really jell and mesh together has taken a while."

Annis and her fellow seniors are looking to help the team jell into something special this season.

"The last few seasons haven't been as good as we would've hoped so hopefully we'll be able to accomplish that," said Annis.

"We are all getting along. We had some losses but we recovered; that will benefit the younger players. I am just really happy that we won a game. We know that we can do it so hopefully we'll be able to do it again."

With Numann Spearheading Stingy Defense, PU Women's Soccer Primed for Ivy Opener

Taylor Numann and her teammates on the Princeton University women's soccer team were chomping at the bit as they hit the field last Friday night to take on visiting Towson.

After having a two-game Texas swing cancelled the previous weekend due to Hurricane Ike, the Tigers hadn't been in action since a September 7 loss at Hofstra.

"I think we were really excited for a game environment," said senior defender Numann. "We were a little bit rusty after having not practiced for so long."

In the first half of its second appearance at the new Myslik Field at Roberts Stadium, Princeton showed its rust, looking out of synch as it got just two shots as the teams headed to intermission deadlocked in a scoreless draw.

The Tigers looked more dangerous in the second half, generating nine shots but neither side could find the back of the net with the game toed 0-0 after regulation.

Nearly seven minutes into the first overtime, Princeton senior striker Sarah Peteraf ended the drought as she found the back of the net to give the Tigers a 1-0 victory.

Afterward, Numann acknowledged that Princeton was relieved to pull out the win and send its fans home happy on a night when it wasn't at its best.

"We don't want anything less than a win on this field; that is a big motivation for us," said Numann, a native of Campbell, Calif. and two-time All-Ivy League performer.

"We really feel like we like we have a homefield advantage; the facility is amazing and the crowd is supportive. We hope that as we go on in the season, we'll win it a little bit more handily."

While it may take a little more time for the offense to get rolling, defense has been a constant for Princeton which moved to 2-1-1 on the season with a 1-1 tie at St. John's last Sunday.

"I think defense is something we have been really focusing on," said Numann, the leader of a stingy defense that has surrendered only three goals so far this season.

"If you don't get scored on, you can't lose. Our mantra for this season has been battle. It is something we really try to focus on in every game; winning our individual battles and battling together."

With Princeton's Ivy campaign kicking off this Saturday with a game at Yale, Numann is hoping the Tigers can find a rhythm.

"We just need to build some momentum and build some confidence," asserted Numann.

"At times we are a little bit panicked with the ball. As we play more games, we will get more composed."

Princeton head coach Julie Shackford acknowledged that her team was fortunate to pull out a win on a night when it was not very good with the ball.

"We weren't sharp, it was a very ugly game," said Shackford.

"It was one of those games where we were not connecting. We did enough to gut it out."

Shackford pointed to Peteraf and promising freshman forward Kalie Bartholomew as bright spots for the Tigers.

"Peteraf has done really well this year," said Shackford of the senior, who scored a goal in Princeton's 2-1 opening day victory over Boston University.

"You can't take anything away from her; we've been able to count on her which has been nice. Kalie Bartholomew stretched the defense a little bit. I thought she did a nice job just opening things up."

The Tiger defense did a nice job as it held Towson to a paltry three shots on the evening.

"I don't think we did anything wrong on defense, there were a couple of miscues maybe but no real blunders," said Shackford.

"I don't think that there was anything that I was really worried about. I wasn't really worried tactically that they were breaking us down."

With the Ivy season approaching, Shackford is looking for her team to be shrewder tactically.

"I just want to see us evolving and trying to figure out who we are," said Shackford.

"It's been a little disjointed in the season. I'd like to see us keep the ball better and dictate play a little bit more. We need to get the right combinations on the field; we are still struggling with that a little bit."

Numann, for her part, believes that the victory over Towson shows that Princeton has the character to help it keep winning as it finds the right mix.

"In the past there have been games that could've gone either way," said Numann. "It's important for us to win those games that are so tight and close.

If Princeton can keep doing that, Numann and her fellow seniors have the chance to achieve their ultimate goal.

"I tear up every time I think about it," said Numann, referring to going through her final college season.

"I know all the seniors feel the same way, we want to win the Ivy championship. We want to go to the NCAA tournament more than anything."

PU Sports Roundup

PU Women's Volleyball Splits at Colgate Tournament

The Princeton University women's volleyball team moved to 4-2 on the season by splitting its two matches Saturday at the Colgate Invitational.

Sheena Donohue powered Princeton to a 3-0 win over Colgate in the opener, but Big East opponent Syracuse overpowered the Tigers in a 3-0 victory later in the day.

Donohue recorded a team-best 11 kills to push Princeton to a 25-18, 25-17, 25-16 victory over the host Raiders. Freshman Cathryn Quinn added 10 kills and hit .500 in the match, while senior setter Bailey Robinson recorded 36 assists in the victory.

Parker Henritze recorded 10 kills for Princeton in a 25-17, 25-19, 25-19 loss to Syracuse.

In upcoming action, Princeton plays at the Seton Hill Tournament from September 26-27.

PU Men's Soccer Swept in Chicago

Unable to get its offense untracked, the Princeton University men's soccer team dropped games to two nationally ranked teams last weekend at the Chicago Classic.

On Friday, Princeton fell 2-0 to No. 11 University of Illinois at Chicago in a game which saw the Tigers get outshot 7-6.

Two days later, Princeton got edged 1-0 by No. 9 Northwestern despite outshooting the Wildcats 14-12.

The Tigers, now 1-4, play at Monmouth on September 25 and at Fairleigh Dickinson on September 28.

PU Men's Water Polo Fifth at ECACs

Junior Doug Wigley led the way as the Princeton University men's water polo team topped Iona 8-5 last Sunday in Cambridge, Mass to finish fifth in the ECAC Championships.

The Tigers, now 3-4 overall, play at Johns Hopkins and Navy on September 27 and at George Washington on September 28.

PU Men's Ice Hockey First in ECAC Poll

Coming off a superb season which saw it win the ECAC Hockey tournament, the Princeton University men's ice hockey team was picked to finish first by the ECACH preseason coaches and media polls, the league said Monday.

The Tigers, who went 21-14 overall and 14-8 in ECAC play last winter, received nine first-place votes from the coaches and 118 total points to be ranked atop the preseason coaches poll. Harvard was picked to place second with Cornell chosen for third.

Princeton was also atop the media poll, taking 15 first-place votes and 278 points. Harvard, Cornell and Clarkson, respectively, made up the rest of the top four.

Princeton returns 21 players off of last season's championship squad, including reigning ECACH Player of the Year Lee Jubinville and second team All-ECAC selection Brett Wilson. Jubinville, Wilson and Cam MacIntyre give Princeton three players who finished last season with more than 30 points.

In addition to the polls, the ECAC announced the coaches and media preseason all-league teams. Princeton placed two players, goalkeeper Zane Kalemba and Jubinville, on the team. Kalemba was the ECACH Tournament Most Outstanding Player last March and was 19-11 last season with five shutouts. Jubinville was the ECAC and Ivy League Player of the Year and a first-team All-America as he scored 39 points to lead the team and win the conference-scoring race.

Princeton opens the regular season on October 31 at Brown.

PU Women's Ice Hockey Picked 6th in ECAC Poll

The Princeton University women's ice hockey team was picked to finish sixth in the ECAC Hockey preseason coaches poll, the league said Monday.

Defending ECACH champion Harvard was chosen atop the standings with St. Lawrence second and Dartmouth third. Last winter, the Tigers went 14-12-6 overall and 12-10-3 in league play as they finished fifth in the ECACH.

Princeton sophomore defenseman Sasha Sherry was named to the ECACH preseason all-league team. Sherry was a second-team All-ECAC selection a season ago and was named to the ECAC All-Rookie team as she recorded 21 points during her rookie campaign.

The Tigers start the regular season by hosting Connecticut on October 24.

SHARK ATTACK: Princeton University freshman field hockey star Kathleen Sharkey controls the ball last Saturday as 15th-ranked Princeton topped visiting Dartmouth 4-0 in the Ivy League opener for both teams. Sharkey scored a goal in the win with Tina Bortz, Kraftin Schreyer, and Alyssa Pyros also finding the back of the cage as Princeton started the defense of its Ivy League title in style. In upcoming action, the Tigers, now 4-1 overall, will hit the road with games at No. 12 Penn State on September 24, at Yale on September 27, and at Albany on September 28. QB Dudeck Sets the Tone With TD Run As Hun Football Routs Mercersburg 38-13

FAST BREAK: Hun School post-graduate running back Donald Coleman breaks a tackle on his way to 186 yards rushing in Hun's 38-13 win over visiting Mercersburg Academy last Saturday. After having been shut out by Wyoming Seminary (Pa.) in its season opener, the Hun School football team was looking to get on the board early last Saturday against visiting Mercersburg Academy.

Midway through the first quarter, the Raiders drove down to the Mercersburg nine-yard line and Hun quarterback Brendan Dudeck decided to take matters into his own hands.

The junior took off on a keeper but apparently got stopped at the five as he collided with a pack of Blue Storm defenders.

Undeterred, the 5'10, 155-pound Dudeck squirted through the defenders and sprinted in the end zone for a touchdown.

Dudeck's scoring jaunt set the tone as the Raiders scored three more touchdowns in the half to take a 25-0 lead into intermission.

Hun cruised from there, rolling to a 38-13 win to improve to 1-1 overall and 1-0 in Mid-Atlantic Prep League (MAPL) play.

Afterward, a smiling Dudeck still had figured out how he had escaped for his touchdown run.

"I just cut back and somehow made it through the guys who tried to tackle me," said Dudeck, who rushed for 32 yards on three carries and hit 3-of-11 passes for 43 yards. "That was an amazing feeling."

Hun was ready for a better feeling last Saturday as it looked to rebound from its 10-0 opening day loss to Wyoming.

"That was a tough game, we got right inside the five and two times we had devastating turnovers," said Dudeck.

"We really capitalized in this game, we got everything we needed to. I think our whole team picked it up. Our linemen really helped us out. Nick [Williams] had a great game. Our receivers did well, Chris [Alston] had a lot of nice catches."

Dudeck, the son of Hun head coach David Dudeck, is enjoying being at the controls of the Raider offense after having been the backup quarterback the last two seasons.

"It's awesome being the starting quarterback; I've been around the program since my dad started coaching here," said Dudeck, who has been a starting defensive back the last two seasons and made an interception in the win over Mercersburg.

"I have been a quarterback my whole life; it's a great feeling to be doing what I dreamed of."

With a sheepish grin, Dudeck acknowledged that being the son of the head coach has its ups and downs.

"It's tough but it's great ride," said Dudeck. "He is always a lot harder on me but you've got to be that much better. It's a great feeling when you do well; he's just there right next to you."

Coach Dudeck, for his part, felt great about how his son performed on Saturday.

"I don't give him a lot of compliments but today he stepped up; he made plays for us," said Dudeck.

"He needed to do that. At times, it wasn't the prettiest but as long as he gets the job done, that's the key. I'm real proud of him and I think he's learning little by little."

Dudeck was proud of his team's collective offensive effort which saw Hun outgain Mercersburg 456 yards to 148.

"Any time you put 38 points on the board, you've got to be pretty proud of your offense," said Dudeck, who got 186 yards rushing and two touchdowns from post-graduate star Donald Coleman with senior Nick Williams gaining 140 yards and scoring one touchdown.

"I think today we came out excited and jacked up; the kids were ready to play real hard. Some kids stepped up and made some plays for us. The line opened some holes and the backs and receivers played very well."

The Raiders also showed character to go along with their hard play. "I think the biggest thing I see in this team is the fight and the resiliency," asserted Dudeck with his voice rising, noting that the team dealt with a series of injuries in its preseason camp.

"We got smacked in the face last week but they didn't stop. They came out this week and they said let's go again. They want to get better; they want to win. They go to practice every day and practice as hard as they can. Some of the results of that were evident today."

A big part of getting those results was developing a little self-belief after the loss to Wyoming.

"We talked all week about having confidence," added Dudeck, whose squad plays at Penn Charter on September 27.

"When you play sports or you do anything with confidence, you are able to play at a higher level. I think today you saw some older kids step up and some younger kids step up. They played with confidence; they played like they belonged."

While Dudeck was encouraged by the win, he knows that his team can't get overconfident.

"We are a work in progress," maintained Dudeck. "I know next week that we are going to face a very good Penn Charter team and that every week we are going to have to work our tails off to get a win. I think this is a little bit of a confidence builder."

Quarterback Dudeck, for his part, echoed his father's sentiments. "We didn't really get any confidence last game," said Dudeck.

"This game, as soon as we started scoring and made some plays, everybody got that confidence and swagger."

RISING SON: Hun School junior quarterback Brendan Dudeck fires that ball last Saturday in Hun's 38-13 win over visiting Mercersburg Academy. Dudeck, the son of Hun head coach David Dudeck, scored the game's first touchdown on a nine-yard quarterback sneak. Dudeck ended the day with 32 yards rushing on three carries and hitting 3-of-11 passes for 43 yards.

FLASH GORDON: Princeton High junior running back Josh Gordon tries to elude a tackler in action earlier this season. Last Friday, Gordon raced past a lot of Ewing tacklers, rushing for 107 yards and three touchdowns on seven carries as PHS routed the Blue Devils 39-7. Heeding Wake-up Call From Opening Day Loss, PHS Football Rebounds by Routing Ewing 39-7

Steve Everette imitated Johnny Cash's sartorial style last week but not because he is a fan of the late country music star.

Instead, the Princeton High football head coach was the man in black at practice last week, looking to set the tone as PHS worked on bouncing back from its 29-3 opening day drubbing at the hands of Nottingham.

"The mood in practice was glum, I wore black everyday," said Everett.

"The kids worked their tails off, the coaching staff worked its tail off. The loss to Nottingham was a wake-up call for everybody."

Last Friday, the Little Tigers woke up early as they played at Ewing. With speedy junior Josh Gordon racing for touchdown runs of 27 and 22 yards the first two times he touched the ball, PHS jumped out to a 14-0 lead.

Then bruising tailback Trevor Barsamian provided the body blows, pounding for 156 yards on 26 carries as the Little Tigers pulled away to a 39-7 romp over the Blue Devils and improved to 1-1.

In Everette's view, the formula for success was straightforward.

"We had a good week of practice," said Everett. "We got back to basics, blocking, tackling, and running the football."

The play of Gordon, who gained only 17 yards in the loss to Nottingham, was a big lift for the Little Tigers.

"Josh gave us what we have been looking for from him," said Everette of Gordon who ended the night with three touchdowns and 107 yards on just seven carries.

"He was banged up at the end of training camp and he might have still been banged up a little bit last week. He's a special player."

The combination of Gordon and the 245-pound Barsamian makes PHS hard to defend.

"Some people like to call them thunder and lightning but I think of them as the hammer and the nail," maintained Everette.

"Trevor hammers you and then Josh is the nail in the coffin. If we have a lead late in the game, the other teams don't like tackling a guy that goes 245-250."

While the backs deservedly got kudos for their production, it was the inspired play of the PHS offensive line that sprung things.

"Those kids took it upon themselves to do better," added Everette, whose team outgained Ewing 408 yards to 189.

"Seniors Joey Giacalone and Tom Hines took the offensive line by the collar and said we are better than how we played against Nottingham. We have great senior leadership. The seniors made the holes and the juniors ran through them."

The Little Tigers also got some good leadership from its quarterback tandem of senior Connor Ryan and junior Mike Olentine, who both played efficiently in the win over Ewing.

Ryan hit 6-of-10 passes for 81 yards and a touchdown while Olentine was 3-for-6 for 59 yards.

"That was what we want to do, both kids played and they both get the chance to sit back and see what's going on," said Everette. "We have a package for each kid."

Everette is optimistic that Friday's performance will portend what is in store for the Little Tigers this fall.

"I hope the Ewing game was a more accurate reflection," said Everette.

"We are facing a tough WW/P-N team next week. We watched them last Saturday and they are much improved. We are going to see if we can put a few good games together; we have had a tough time doing that in the past."

The painful memory of the Nottingham loss should help PHS keep its nose to the grindstone.

"I think the kids got a good taste of what it is like to lose and they didn't like it," said Everette.

"They had put in the work in the offseason and they didn't play to their ability against Nottingham. They gave a better effort on Friday and they saw what can happen."

A lot of good things could happen this fall if PHS keeps giving the kind of effort it displayed against Ewing.

PDS Boys' Soccer Taking Lumps As It Learns To Be Tactically Shrewd

It became clear pretty early last Wednesday that the Princeton Day School boys' soccer team was going to be in for a long afternoon against visiting Peddie School.

PDS surrendered a goal in the first 2:30 of the contest and found itself trailing 3-0 at halftime.

In the early stages of the second half, the Panthers were able to achieve more possession but Peddie was awarded a penalty kick on a physical tackle and cashed in to build a 4-0 advantage. The Falcons never looked back as they rolled to a 5-0 win.

After giving his team some stern post-game words, PDS head coach Malcolm Murphy acknowledged that his side lacked the tactical acumen to slow down the Falcons.

"We are trying to explain to them that this is the time you need a blue collar job done and everybody has to be part of that," said Murphy.

"We have to find the given tactic that will at least keep us in the game and then we can figure it out from there."

With a team stocked with underclassmen, Murphy realizes that uneven play is inevitable as his players gain experience.

"Things work for a while and it breaks down," added Murphy, whose team was outshot 14-7 in the loss to Peddie.

"Somebody wants to go and do something else and doesn't realize that if they don't pay attention to the tactics somebody else has to cover for them. We are not that strong yet."

Murphy, though, is confident that his team can become strong over time. "We are not believing that we are good enough to win anything this year but we can win games," said Murphy, whose team won two of its first three games this fall.

"We can lay the foundation; we can do some good things. We've proved it early in the season."

In order to realize its potential, the Panther players are going to have to toughen up mentally.

"We lack that experience to understand that even when things aren't going for you in the game, you can recover from it," added Murphy, whose team had another tough experience as it fell 1-0 to visiting Allentown in overtime last Saturday to drop to 2-4 on the season.

"That's the experience that comes with guys who play year-round, knowing that there is always a battle on the field. There is always something to be won and played for."

PDS has something to work with in superb freshmen Rui Pinhelro and Paul Zetterberg.

"Rui and Paul are good, they are good listeners, they are analytical enough to understand the tactics," said Murphy, who also starts three promising sophomores in Robby Smukler, Justin Ward, and Maxime Hoppenot.

"We are having to move them around to test them a bit elsewhere. We're laying a lot of responsibility on our forwards, we don't have a very experienced midfield."

In Murphy's view, the experience his team is gaining by playing against sides like Peddie can only help it in the long run.

"I thought our conference was pretty good in the past; now I think this is an excellent conference," said Murphy, whose team hosts Hun on September 25 before playing at Ewing on September 27.

"The teams are playing good soccer all the time; playing some glorious stuff, composed, quality soccer. It hinders us in the results but it's something I can use on the board and tell them this is where you can be at the end of the year if we start working at it now."

PDS Field Hockey Plagued by Uneven Play, Needs Battle-Tested Seniors to Take Charge

In 2007, the Princeton Day School field hockey team stumbled out of the gate to a 0-5 start.

The Panthers, though, righted the ship, going 9-4-1 the rest of the way and advancing to the state Prep and Mercer County semifinals.

Featuring a core of seven battle-tested seniors, PDS figured to build on its late surge and be formidable right from the start this fall.

Instead, the Panthers have been having a discouraging case of déjà vu as they are struggling again in the early going.

Last Saturday, PDS built a 1-0 lead over visiting Ewing on a Courtney Klein goal only to lose 2-1 and fall to 1-3 on the season.

In reflecting on the disappointing loss, longtime PDS head coach Jill Thomas acknowledged that her team isn't closing the deal.

"We just didn't finish," said Thomas softly. "I said it after the Peddie game (a 3-2 loss), we have moments of brilliance. I think you have to learn how to finish, you've got to learn how to win."

After the game, the Panthers held an extended post-game meeting on the hill above Smoyer Field as they thrashed out some issues.

"We had a lot of experienced players talking after the game and saying some good things," said Thomas, whose team did some good things last Monday when it topped the Ranney School 3-0 as Mariel Jenkins scored twice and Georgia Travers added another. "Now they've got to put it on the field."

The main thing that Thomas is looking at in the short term is a total team effort from the opening whistle to the final horn.

"You have to bring your 'A'-game everyday; you have to play 60 minutes," asserted Thomas.

"We were up 1-0 but the game is not over; we played in their offensive end the majority of the game. They wanted it a little bit more, it's heart and intensity. Kudos to them, they didn't quit. We just assumed things when we got up; goals are too precious in this game. You can't get up by one and sit back on your laurels."

Thomas is cautiously optimistic that this year's team can emulate the 2007 team's strong finish.

"We started 0-5 last year, we are 1-3 right now, you have to look at that," said Thomas, whose team plays at George School (Pa.) on September 26 and at Blair Academy on September 27.

"We'll see where we go next week. It's up to them, they have to do it. When you have that many seniors, they have to do some of it. When we all get on the same page, we'll be alright."

—Bill Alden

BIG ASSIST: Princeton Day School sophomore field hockey star Sydney Jenkins whacks the ball up the field in recent action. Last Monday, Jenkins chipped in two assists as PDS topped Ranney School 3-0 to improve to 2-3 on the season. Struggling to Develop Finishing Touch, Hun School Boys' Soccer Starts 1-2-1

Things didn't start well this season for the Hun School boys' soccer team.

Unable to generate any offense, the Raiders fell 3-0 to WW/P-S in their season opener on September 13.

Three days later, Hun continued to misfire as they fell behind George School (Pa.) 1-0 heading into halftime.

At that point, new Hun head coach Pat Quirk decided it was time for him to light a fire under his team.

"The message at half was telling them to find it within them to start playing soccer the way we are supposed to play soccer," said Quirk.

"I told them that the first 15 minutes was nothing like the way Hun School plays soccer. Towards the end of the first half, we started doing what we do and controlling the ball."

NO DOUBTING THOMAS: Hun School boys' soccer senior star Thomas Nicholas boots the ball in recent action. Nicholas chipped in a goal last Thursday as Hun topped Chestnut Hill (Pa.) 3-2. Last Saturday, Nicholas and his teammates failed to build on that win as they fell 1-0 to Mercersburg Academy (Pa.) in their Mid-Atlantic Prep League (MAPL) opener.

Showing some fire, Hun pressed forward for most of the second half, generating several corner kicks and some good scoring opportunities.

The Raiders broke through when sophomore Mark Nicholas blasted home a goal late in regulation to force overtime.

In the extra session, the Raiders kept the heat on but couldn't break through, settling for a 1-1 draw.

While Quirk wasn't pleased with the result, he was happy to see his players battle back.

"We could've given up after being down 1-0 to a team that we probably should've beaten," said Quirk. "The guys fought back and they dug deep. I am hoping we can get on a roll."

The Raiders did build on the tie with George, topping Chestnut Hill (Pa.) 3-2 last Thursday as Devin Emerson, Ryan Kreger, and Thomas Nicholas each found the back of the net.

Hun, though, took a step back last Saturday as the problems with finishing reappeared in a 1-0 loss to visiting Mercersburg Academy (Pa.) as it moved to 1-2-1 on the season.

Quirk acknowledged that his team needs to develop a killer instinct around the goal.

"It's about trying to find that guy who has ice in his veins and who can finish," said Quirk, whose team has been hurt by the absence of injured senior striker Steve Norman.

"We have been trying to address that (guys standing in the box), and to get the guys to learn how to anticipate things. It's tough to beat that habit of just watching the ball."

In Quirk's view, the blueprint for success comes down to getting back to some habits that have characterized the program in recent years.

"We need to get back to our style of soccer, getting a lot of touches," said Quirk, whose team plays at Princeton Day School on September 25 and at Penn Charter on September 27 before hosting Academy of New Church on September 29.

"I want us to keep control of the ball and get back to trying to find a guy into the middle."

—Bill Alden

AIR BALL: Hun School boys' soccer sophomore Julian Plummer flies high as he chases down a ball in Hun's 1-0 loss to visiting Mercersburg Academy (Pa.) last Saturday. In upcoming action, Hun, which moved to 1-2-1 with the defeat, plays at Princeton Day School on September 25 and at Penn Charter on September 27 before hosting Academy of New Church on September 29.

When Workplace Debate Becomes Workplace Harassment

Whether you support Barack Obama or Sara Palin, (who's her running mate again?), or even if you are truly undecided on the candidates, I think we can all agree on one thing about this Presidential Election: if nothing else, it sure provokes discussion. More often than not, the discussion turns to race and gender. Can a black man be elected President? Can a hockey mom run the free world? To say the least, these can be touchy subjects.

But when does someone's "offensive" opinions become workplace harassment? Certainly, the First Amendment protects speech, including controversial beliefs. But on the other hand, not all speech is protected, especially in the workplace. Employers and employees alike should know where the line is drawn.

The short answer is this. Yes, a single harsh comment or slur can technically be "severe" enough to support a lawsuit. Realistically speaking, however, offensive speech becomes harassment when it is part of a larger, "pervasive" pattern of hostility and has a negative effect on the target's job performance or prospects for career advancement.

People call me all the time wanting to sue their employer because they got fired, or did not get the promotion they feel qualified for. They may "feel" the reason is because of their race or gender, but in the absence of proof or corroboration, they have no case. The advice I give them is simple: if you feel you are being harassed or discriminated against, you first need to document the incidents. A great way to do this is to send an email to yourself describing what happened. This will time-stamp the incidents and will corroborate your version of events down the line. If the conduct was severe or it continues, you should then file a complaint with your employer. All employers are required to investigate such complaints. If your employer fails to correct the situation, or retaliates against you in a demonstrable way, then you should call a lawyer.

Employers also call me to find out how to protect themselves from the specter of a frivolous harassment suit. After all, no employer can control every word out of every employee's mouth. My first piece of advice is always this: as an employer, you must make it known that harassment and discrimination are not tolerated. More importantly, you must be able to prove that your philosophy translates into practice before a situation arises. The best first step is to encapsulate your anti-harassment policy into an Employee Handbook or "Employee Contract," which can be an elaborate booklet or a basic, one-page statement provided to each employee when they are hired. You should also prominently post the policy in the workplace and encourage employees to report harassing conduct. And, above all, if someone does report harassment, take it seriously. Talk to the people involved, and if there has been harassment, do something to fix it. An employer's inaction in the face of a complaint is the second-worst thing you can do. The worst is to retaliate against the complainant.

In short, debating the qualifications of a "black man" or a "hockey mom" for President is not harassment. But a pattern of racially abusive or sexualized banter that singles out a co-worker or subordinate certainly can be. Employers must step in when they see such hostile acts, and employees must document the conduct and stand up for themselves if it occurs.

The semis and finals are slated to be held September 24 at Mercer County Park. In other action, the Little Tigers host a match with Allentown High on September 25.

SEVEN-UP: Hun School girls' soccer senior Megan Schermerhorn, right, chases down the ball last Saturday in Hun's 7-1 win over visiting Mercersburg Academy (Pa.). Schermerhorn chipped in two assists in the win which improved Hun to 2-0. Arielle Collins, Blake Stockton, and Holly Hargreaves each scored two goals in the victory which saw the Raiders build a 4-0 halftime lead and they never looked back. EYECARE FACTS
MONTGOMERY EYE CARE
Presented by Dr. Mary E. Boname
Optometric Physician
CERT #27OMO00032100 LIC # 5298

IN THE PINK

Conjunctivitis, or "pink eye," is a common condition that affects about five million school children in the country annually, which translates to about one in eight children. Inflammation of the eye's transparent outer membrane (conjunctiva) leads to a bloodshot eye, red eyelids, and weepy discharge. Because this infection, which may be viral or bacterial, is so infectious, schools often ask that children with pink eye remain at home. Children with conjunctivitis are warned against rubbing their eyes in an effort to keep the infection from spreading to the other eye. While conjunctivitis usually clears up on its own after about a week, the Optometric Physician may be able to shorten the duration of the infection with eye drops.

Conjunctivitis is highly contagious. Please call MONTGOMERY EYE CARE at 609-279-0005 to schedule an eye exam if your child has bloodshot eyes or weepy discharge. We are licensed to prescribe medications for conjunctivitis, eye infections, and allergies. We are also here to address your emergency eye care needs. Our practice is located at Montgomery Center at 1325 Rt. 206. Office hours are Mon 10-8; Tues 10-5; Wed and Thurs 10-7; Fri 10-6; and Sat 9-3.

P.S. If children complain of itchy eyelids, try bathing them with a wet cotton swab and one drop of no-tears baby shampoo, after which the eyes should be rinsed thoroughly.

Family Advice Column:

School and The Overcritical Parent

By the Rev. Peter K. Stimpson

The Rev. Peter K. Stimpson

QUESTION: My wife tells me that I'm too harsh with our kids. When I was growing up, my Dad was a lot more than harsh, pushing me all the time to work hard in school and giving me a good swift kick in the butt when I didn't. Life is hard. What's wrong with preparing kids for what they're going to find when they graduate from school and leave home?

ANSWER: Helping your child to work hard in school and prepare for the demands that life will inevitably make upon him or her is a tremendous gift that a parent can offer a child. But portraying life in a cynical way tarnishes your gift, and delivering that message in a harsh manner confuses the child, making them wonder whether their value and your love are conditional upon performance.

While you want your son or daughter to live up to their potential, you do not want them to sweat buckets when they come home with an F in spelling in 4th Grade, fearing that you may revoke their membership card in the family. They need to know that you want them to do their best, but that your love is unconditional. Win or lose, you will be there for them.

It is important that you teach that distinction now, lor il you do not, they may later internalize the formula of inner worth being predicated upon outer perlormance and lorever have an overcritical monkey on their backs. As kids, the examplos are easy enough to spot; all you need do is watch their reaction to disappointments: getting a C instead ol an A in math, not making the lootball team in high school, not making honor roll, and so forth.

Your response to their reaction will be key. If you are critical, scolding them for "gooling ofl" or labeling them "a loser" who will "never amount to anything il you keep this up", you are reinforcing the negative message with which they have already branded themselves. When they leave home, your role in this process will end, but they will be running lor the rest ol their lives to prove themselves through a better job, a higher salary, a lower goll handicap, a better neighborhood, or whatever bespeaks success to them.

By now being reasonable and sharing their disappointment, but reassuring them ol your love and encouraging them to try harder next time, you mirror lor them their value, and make them realize that tomorrow is, after all, another day. As their value is within them, then a loss today does not a loser make. Their innate abilities will rise to the occasion the next time, the pain of the disparity today between one's inner potential and outer mistake being countered by another chance at that math test tomorrow that will most probably yield a dilferent result.

So, prepare your child for life through school, but do so with understanding and love, and without harshness and cynicism.

Betty Constable

Elizabeth "Betty" Howe Constable, 83, a longtime Princeton resident and Princeton University's first women's squash coach, died September 9.

She was born and raised in Weston, Mass. and later in New Haven, Conn., where she married her husband, W. Pepper Constable Jr. in 1950.

The dominant squash player of the 1950s, she was a central force behind the growth of women's squash in the U.S. She was a five-time U.S. National Squash Singles Champion. The Howe Cup/U.S. National Squash Team Championships was named in honor of the Howe family women — Betty, her twin sister Peggy, and her mother, Margaret, all U.S. national champions. In addition to her five national titles, Mrs. Constable took four veterans' (over 40) titles, three veterans' doubles titles, and played in three Wolfe-Noel competitions, contributing to America's only victory ever in Great Britain, in doubles in Edinburgh in 1950.

A member of the U.S. Squash Hall of Fame and the College Squash Association Hall of Fame, Mrs. Constable achieved an unmatched record of success. As the first head coach of Princeton University women's squash team, she left an unmatched win-loss record of 117-15 during her tenure from 1971 to 1991. Ten of her teams finished their seasons with an undefeated record. She also mentored three national intercollegiate champions, Wendy Zakarko, Nancy Gengler, and Demer Holleran, who won seven individual championships collectively.

In 1973, she helped create the Intercollegiate division of the Howe Cup. Mrs. Constable's mother, Mrs. Howe, donated the trophy for the intercollegiate division. Under Mrs. Constable's leadership, Princeton won the cup 12 times in the 19 times they competed for it.

Mrs. Constable was predeceased by her husband, Pepper, in 1986, and by a son, W. Howe Constable in August, 2008. She is survived by her children W. Pepper Constable III of London, England, Margo Constable of Idledale, Colo., Kacey Constable Nugent of Old Saybrook, Conn., and Liza Constable of Nelson, N.H.; three granddaughters; and two grandsons.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. on September 28 at the Princeton University Chapel. A reception will follow. Burial will be on Nantucket Island on October 5.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Friends of Princeton Women's Squash at Princeton University, c/o Gail Ramsay/Friends Donation, P.O. Box 71, Princeton University, Princeton 08544-0071.

Elizabeth Hutter

Elizabeth L. "Duffy" Hutter, a longtime Princeton resident and former Township Committeewoman and Planning Board member, died September 15 at Acorn Glen Assisted Living in Princeton.

Born in 1923 near Kingston, Pa., the daughter of John Hancock and Maria Pennypacker Lance, she was raised on a farm in northeastern Pennsylvania. Her farm upbringing, relish for learning, and love of sports including horseback riding, ice skating, and tennis, engendered a deep and abiding appreciation of the natural world.

After graduating from the Wyoming Seminary and Bucknell Junior College, she moved to Washington, D.C. to become a cartographer and editor of intelligence reports for the Army Map Service during World War II. She spent many weekends outside of Washington pursuing a new interest, spelunking, and was the first person to explore Duffy's Cavern. In 1949 she moved to Princeton to work for Julian Boyd at Princeton University as an Associate Editor of the Papers of Thomas Jefferson. There she met and married her husband Edwin "Peter" Hutter, a physicist at RCA, in 1952. In the 1960s they both became involved in numerous environmental, transportation, and other civic causes, serving on many municipal and county task forces and committees, and becoming founders of the Friends of Princeton Environment (now Friends of Princeton Open Space).

In 1975 Mrs. Hutter was elected to Princeton Township Committee and became Deputy Mayor in 1977. She was a longtime member of the Regional Planning Board of Princeton and served as Vice Chairman from 1981 until 1983. The Township named a new link road, Duffy Place, in her honor in November 2007.

She was predeceased by her husband, and sisters Ruth O'Neill, Ramsay Raymond of Princeton, and Patricia Appelmans, formerly of Princeton. She is survived by a daughter, Fairfax Hutter; two sons, John and Peter Hutter; and three granddaughters.

A memorial service will be held at Trinity Church, 33 Mercer Street, on Saturday, October 11 at 11 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Friends of Princeton Open Space; or to the North Branch Land Trust (dedicated to preserving the North Branch of the Susquehanna watershed) on Carverton Road, Trucksville, Pa. 18708.

Sandra M. Jefferson

Sandra M. Jefferson, 72, of Lawrenceville, died September 20 in the University Medical Center at Princeton.

Born in Trenton, she was a lifelong Princeton resident before moving to Lawrenceville in 2000.

A graduate of Princeton High School in 1953, she attended the American Theatre Wing and Rider College. She was employed as an administrative secretary for 32 years by Princeton Regional Schools. During her tenure she was also instrumental in the Johnson Park School annual spring festival. From 1961 to 1967 she was the Director of the volunteer candy stripers at Princeton Hospital.

She served as a Republican Committeewoman for District 2 in Princeton Borough and was an officer of the Mercer County Young Republicans and vice chairman and acting chairman of the Young Republicans of New Jersey Inc.

She was a member and officer of the Pennington Players, and head of junior activities for Herbert Kenwith's Princeton Summer Theatre's Straw Hat circuit productions at McCarter Theatre. She was also a member of McCarter's P.J.&B. Company from 1970 to 1990 under the direction of Milton Lyon, during which time she was a chorus member, featured player, and stage manager.

She was a member of Nassau Presbyterian Church.

The daughter of the late Walter B. Jr. and Williamina (Winnie) M. Jefferson, she is survived by an aunt and uncle, Robert and Barbara Jefferson, and five cousins.

The funeral service will be today, September 24 at 1:30 p.m. at the Mather-Hodge Funeral Home, 40 Vandeventer Avenue. Ms. Jefferson's cousin, the Rev. Donna M. Bevensee, will officiate. Burial will be in Princeton cemetery.

Merle D. Walker

Merle D. Walker, 77, of Princeton, died September 9.

A native of Haverford, Pa., she was the daughter of Denzil and Merle Prince Walker. She was a graduate of Haverford High School and Stephens College.

Ms. Walker resided most of her life in New Hampshire. While a resident of Exeter, she managed a shop operated by the League of New Hampshire Craftsmen. She then became the organization's president, overseeing statewide operations for a decade from the main office in Concord. She was a familiar figure at League events throughout New Hampshire, particularly the annual fair at Lake Sunapee. She traveled to China in the 1970s as part of an American arts delegation.

She was an arts administrator who never lost her appreciation for artists and their work. Her homes were always decorated with the prints and pottery of New Hampshire craftsmen.

After leaving the League, she returned to her native Pennsylvania and became executive director of the Schuylkill County Council for the Arts in Pottsville. After retiring from that position, she moved to Dublin, Pa. to be near her sisters. She volunteered in the Doylestown Library and in the library of the retirement community at Heritage Towers in Doylestown. She regularly attended services at the First Church of Christ Scientist in Doylestown.

In 2007, she moved to the Tenacre Foundation in Princeton, a Christian Science care facility.

Predeceased by two sisters and a brother, she is survived by a sister, Barbara A. Walker of Doylestown; a niece, Barbara Woolmington-Smith of Orinda, Calif., and a nephew, Robert Woolmington of North Bennington, Vt.

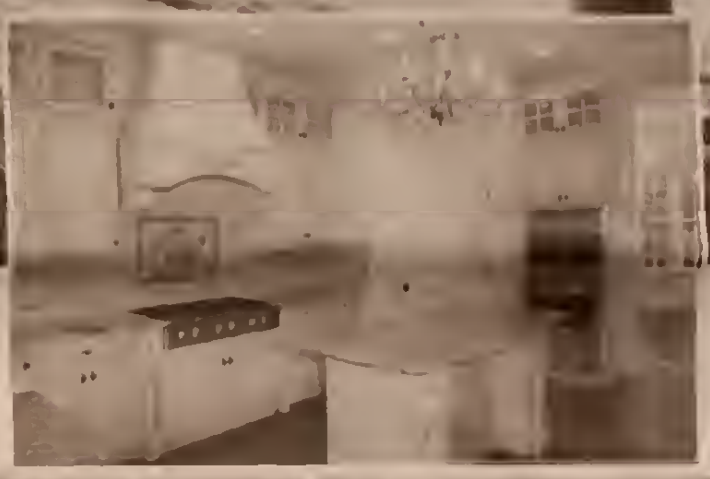
Dressed to the Nines.



Extraordinary millwork, 10-foot ceilings and meticulous detailing lend an air of opulence to this newly constructed five bedroom Princeton beauty, while well-planned spaces meant to be used, not just admired, result in a truly livable house of manageable proportions. A masonry wall and mature growth yield a private 1.53 acre setting. Inside, intricate moldings, crystal light fixtures, and Brazilian cherry floors with inlaid medallions dress all three levels. The formal rooms flanking the foyer are framed by wide openings and a sweeping arch supported by Corinthian columns and pilasters. Beyond the foyer and magnificent staircase lies the family room with stone fireplace and raised hearth. Three walls of windows brighten a library with double tray ceiling. Vanilla glazed cabinetry, crystallized granite countertops, and a marble mosaic surround professional appliances in the glamorously outfitted kitchen. Off the adjoining breakfast room is a circular terrace for al fresco dining. Furniture style vanities and marble tiling dress all three and a half baths. The master suite is a testament to luxury with a fireplace, sitting room, dressing rooms, and elegant bath with Jacuzzi tub. The superbly finished third floor is a charming place to play or relax.

TRENDS IN LUXURY HOME IMPROVEMENT— PART I

Even though the current housing market in general is experiencing a readjustment, the luxury home market is still going strong. Many owners of high end properties see their homes as long term investments as well as a great place to live, and they are putting their money into improvements. Harvard University's Housing Studies Center estimated that $160 billion was spent on home improvements last year, and much of that went for the latest in luxury upgrades.

With environmental issues so much in the forefront these days, green is at the top of the home improvement list. Energy efficient features- extra insulation, double paned windows, Energy Star appliances, and lighting using compact fluorescent bulbs and LEDs, are the most popular upgrades.

But America's top homes are also being retrofitted to tap into alternative energy sources like solar, wind and geothermal. Environmentally conscious flooring such as bamboo or cork, and chemical free paint and building materials, will help support good indoor air quality. All these improvements will save the homeowner utility costs in the long run and dramatically improve the homes energy footprint on the planet.

It's So Easy To Fall In Love

With a sweeping front yard, crisp white exterior and covered front porch, this Lawrence Township Colonial is picture-perfect and it only gets better. Around back, an expansive, two-tiered deck with retractable awning overlooks the big backyard with raised planting beds, bluestone walkways, and a lush lawn surrounded by attractive wood fencing and towering trees. The interior is equally inviting. The hardwood foyer opens to the formal rooms. Plush new carpeting blankets the living room and adjoining family room, where a Palladian window and high ceiling lend unexpected drama and a fireplace adds coziness. A ceramic tile floor dresses the sparkling white kitchen and breakfast area with many updates, both aesthetic and practical. Upstairs, three corner bedrooms share a hall bath. Cathedral ceilings and a skylight make the master bedroom and its private bath airy and bright. I-95 and the shops of Lawrenceville are conveniently close.

AGING IN PLACE

Aging In Place

There's no place like it, says the old song, and for most of us, home is a lot more than just the place we hang our hats. Certainly, the great majority of older people want to remain at home as long as possible, and more and more of them are able to do so. With the help of a variety of organizations, family members, care givers, home health aides, and volunteers of all sorts, many seniors can stay put.

People are working longer, living longer (are generally healthier at older ages than in the past), and are active and engaged longer. It comes as no surprise that they are happier, and often healthier, if they can remain in a home filled with unique memories, and in a community that is familiar and friendly.

Since 1974, seniors in Princeton and the surrounding area have benefited from the Princeton Senior Resource Center (PSRC). This non-profit organization provides many complimentary programs and services to promote healthy aging for Princeton area adults, 55 and older.

In 1994, PSRC assumed responsibility for senior programs at the Suzanne Patterson building, and the wide range of opportunities covers everything from exercise, fitness, and yoga to food and nutrition programs, to art classes, computer labs, literature and history classes, to bridge tournaments, blood pressure screenings and flu shots, to trips and outings.

Friendly Visitor

In addition to these and other programs, PSRC offers many volunteer and support services and a great deal of information to help seniors find ways to remain in their homes and community. Such programs as caregiver support, care coordination, home-delivered meals, in-home safety assessments and nursing assessments are available from PSRC in collaboration with other groups in the Partners Program.

Specialized Services for Seniors and Their Families, Busy Professionals

Continuing to Live at Home

Regarding volunteer services, PSRC executive director Susan Hoskins LCSW says, "Our volunteer support is individualized and tailored to meet your unique needs. Together, we identify where in your life you would benefit from a volunteer, and then we set out to find the perfect match. A volunteer might be a friendly visitor, someone who runs errands for you, or an an extra hand around the house. You decide!"

Caregivers are increasingly being called upon as our population ages. According to a recent study by AARP, there are an estimated 44.4 million caregivers, ages 18 and older in the U.S (almost one in four adults). As PSRC points out, caregivers need support from people "who understand the journey they are on, who can listen to their struggles and frustrations without judgment, as well as the rewards of caregiving, and who can suggest strategies for reducing stress."

PSRC can help to provide access to resources that can help people meet their care recipient's needs, as well as their own. Education on how to provide care appropriately and safely is also offered. Such services as information and referral to area resources; individual and family counseling and consultations; support groups; connection to HomeFriends and LINK programs; resource library; and publications are all available from PSRC.

Coming up next month on October 8 is a free conference for caregivers, including workshops with professionals, from 8:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the PSRC Suzanne Patterson Building.

In addition, always wanting to help provide seniors the means to be engaged and involved, PSRC has instituted a program called "Engaged Retirement: Beyond Financial Planning."

"Lunch and Learn"

"We were surprised at how meager and superficial the existing services were, so we set out to create a program for this community," says Ms. Hoskins. "Retirement can potentially change everything in your life, including where you get satisfaction and esteem, how you challenge your mind, who and where your friends are, where you live, how much time you spend with family, whether you can fulfill life goals, and so much more.

"'Engaged Retirement' offers a free introductory seminar, designed for 'lunch and learn' programs in the workplace and community groups," she continues. "This program explores how we handle change, the five functions of work and how to replace them, what gives a sense of purpose; it introduces an exploration of one's individual preferences and how to make a personal plan."

"We've got the perfect home for you," says the staff of Secure@Home. "Your own."

PSRC is one of the oldest programs in the area to help older people, and Secure@Home is one of the newest. "More and more people want to stay at home, and fewer people are going to nursing homes," points out Jill G. Jaclin, MSW, director of Secure@Home, Living Life Your Way, an initiative of Jewish Family & Children's Services of Greater Mercer County.

A non-sectarian operation, Secure@Home was launched in May 2007, and is available to people throughout Mercer County. It is a membership-based community program designed to enable seniors to live in their homes while receiving a high level of services to maintain their style of living.

"We are general contractors for your health," says Ms. Jaclin. "We help coordinate and get the help you need, whether it's for a medical emergency or light household tasks, such as changing a battery in the smoke detector or a light bulb that could necessitate climbing a ladder."

Other Services

Ms. Jaclin explains that Secure@Home was modeled on the Beacon Hill Village in Boston. "We also worked with the National Executive Service Corps, a group of retired business executives in business and marketing who really helped us get the program off the ground."

Secure@Home's pilot program was in association with Community Without Walls (CWW), a non-profit organization founded in 1992 by four Princeton residents (now grown to 400 members). Designed to provide the social network, information, and educational services that can assist individuals and couples as they age in place, CWW began to explore other services that members might need in order to stay in their homes as long as possible.

As some CWW members began to reach their '70s and '80s, they realized health-care considerations could become a priority, and this resulted in the initial association with Secure@Home.

"A primary goal of CWW is to assist its members in acquiring the knowledge that will enable them to make choices they will need to make as they age," notes CWW mission statement. That includes a wide spec- m ol subjects and information relevant to their needs. /W currently holds meetings in which such topics as ior housing (lor example, Continuing Care Retirement mmunities, Life Care at Home programs, and renovat- personal homes to make them more senior-lriendly), presented. Discussions or lectures on personal health, moir writing, travel, surfing the net, ethical wills, play- dings, among others, are also offered.

n addition, CWW's on-going activities include meetings various members' homes, get-togethers in collee shops, luck suppers, and support groups which assist mem- s and their families in times of personal need, and a ores R Us group to help with situations from programing Rs to changing those hard-to-reach light bulbs.

Now, Secure@Home will provide CWW members, as ll as other older people in greater Mercer County, the pport systems they need to age in place.

Complete Assessment

Secure@Home offers memberships ol one year at $300 dividual) or $350 (couple). This entitles the member to omplete assessment by a geriatric care manager. The spective member's health status and an overall home ety evaluation are included. A care plan, with all relevant ormation regarding medication, physicians, children's ations, etc., is then developed.

24-hour emergency telephone availability is part of the vice, as is a "Monthly Hello" phone call by the Secure@ me staff.

On selected days, members may take advantage of the unteer Chore Corps, who can help with light manual or such as hanging pictures, moving boxes, or light rdening.

n addition, Secure@Home members have access to a e manager who will help coordinate health-related ser- e during crisis or illness, provide liaison and support lor nilies, and act as an advocate lor the member. The first ee hours lor an individual member (five for a couple) e complimentary.

"The wile of a couple who had joined recently was fine, t then had an incident and needed help, including with dical bills and claims," explains Ms. Jaclin. "The care nager lound the right people to help. Care managers n also help with rehab facilities, arrange for members be accompanied to doctor's appointments, and suggest me health agencies."

Secure@Home also arranges discounted transportation service for medical appointments, shopping, social events, etc.

Special Events

Members have the opportunity to participate in special events es- pecially coordinated for them. A recent program was "Managing Your Finances During Difficult Times" (which could hardly have been more appropriate). Upcoming events include Part 1: The 2008 Election and the Senior Vote; an outing to McCarter theater for the new production of Herringbone; and a guided tour at Grounds of Sculpture, among others.

Continuing to be involved and engaged is very important for older people (as it is lor any age), notes Ms. Jaclin, and she emphasizes that it is never too soon to join Secure@Home.

"We currently have 143 members, ages 63 to 93, both couples and singles. Some have no need lor care at this point, some need just a little help, and others have more severe problems. it's a wide spectrum. We really try to encourage people to join before they actually need the help. It's like insurance. Some people say, 'It's a great plan, but I don't need it now.' But they could some day, and it's good to establish a relationship with our stall belore you really need the help."

Those who have joined know how much it has meant to their sense of well-being and ability to stay at home. Says member and Princeton resi- dent Mary Bundy: "The security is such a benefit. Also, a very important thing is they come at the very beginning, and get all the information about your needs, doctors, lawyers, lamily, phone numbers, living wills, insurance policies, etc. So, il anything should happen to you, all the inlormation is there for your children with one phone call."

One Phone Call

Mrs. Bundy has not needed to avail hersell ol many services so far, but she was grateful for a volunteer who came to change the battery in her smoke detector. "He was there about 30 minutes. A charming young man. It is wonderlul to know that with one phone call, I can get all the help I need. Il my plumber retires, they can help me find another. They will steer me to the right place, and with many ol these services, there is a discount.

"I think this is such an important program. This Is something that is taking a big step lorward as a model for the whole country in finding ways for people to stay in their home."

Helping people to remain in their home, in their community, and to continue to contribute is very important to our society, especially as the population ages.

As Jill Jaclin points out: "Older people are a very resilient group. They have terrific stories, and they have a perspective. They emphasize that you can create meaning in your lile at any age, and have the confidence to be creative and do things. They inspire me."

Community Without Walls

Community Without Walls, established in 1992, is a non-profit membership organization serving ages 50+ to 90 +.

It is an association of individuals and couples, in the greater Princeton area, who desire and seek a way to remain in their communities as they age.

The mission of Community Without Walls is to enhance and support the ability of each member to age well. It is a goal of the Community that its members be knowledgeable enough to be able to make choices that will permit them to age in place. "Place" means each member's current residence, and, subsequently, other residences as may be appropriate. To further this goal, the Community engages in activities which may include social support, information, education, and advocacy.

Members provide each other with social support, assistance with errands and a variety of opportunities to make new friends. Members live in the Princetons and nearby communities.
